Prepare to Sift Charges Against Shipbuilders

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP).—Action of the Senate as a whole today was necessary preliminary to the naval committee's investigation of charges that American shipbuilding corporations had had a part in bringing the Geneva disarmament conference of 1927 to its unsuccessful conclusion.

With the added impetus of vigorous support from the White House, the way was cleared for speedy adoption of a resolution drafted by Senator Borah, empowering the committee to proceed with its inquiry.

The naval committee expects to call as its key witness William B. Shearer, whose allegations in a suit against three large shipbuilding corporations for compensation for having acted as their agent at the Geneva conference brought vigorous and reiterated expressions of displeasure from President Hoover, the direction of a department of justice investigation and the pending Senate inquiry.

The New York Shipbuilding Company, a subsidiary of the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation, one of the defendants in Shearer's suit, last night issued a statement asserting that neither it nor its parent corporation had ever "directly or indirectly indulged in propaganda to influence the naval policies of the government at Geneva or elsewhere".

The statement said the company and other has employed Shearer to act as an "observer" at Geneva and that this connection was severed in the fall of 1927. Shearer, it added, was paid $25,000, his fee "in full", with one-third of this amount coming from the New York Shipbuilding Company.

The two other corporations named in Shearer's suit are the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry-dock Company, both of which have issued statements opposing his allegations.

Shearer claims more than $250,000 is due him from the three concerns as compensation for his services at Geneva and elsewhere before and after the conference there.

STEVEN PAWLAK CAPTURED AFTER BEING WOUNDED

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 11 (AP).—Steven Pawlak, Buffalo convict, who with three companions escaped from Auburn State prison during the riots of July 28, was shot and seriously wounded early today in a gun fight with Buffalo police. At a hospital surgeons said the patient was delirious and that his death was a matter of only a few hours.

Pawlak and two companions were riding in a car which had been reported stolen yesterday. Police touring the city in an automobile noticed the license number was one for which they were watching and endeavored to halt the machine. Occupants of both cars deserted the machines while they still were running and, while the cars sped on down the street and crashed into buildings, opened a revolver battle.

Pawlak and a companion were captured, but the third man escaped, though also apparently wounded.

Pawlak was known as an East Side gangster and at the time of his escape from Auburn was serving a life sentence under the Baumes law.

MRS. GOODSELL INJURED IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

The new Durant car of Homer I. Goodsell, 414 Hasbrouck avenue, was badly damaged and Mrs. Goodsell injured Sunday night in a three-car collision on the Rhinecliff road. The accident occurred about 10 o'clock and involved Mr. Goodsell's car and a Paige from Albany and Ford from Brooklyn. Mrs. Goodsell was cut on the face and arms by flying glass and had to be treated by Dr. Becker of High Falls, who was waiting for the ferry. He also treated Mrs. James C. Legg, sister of Mrs. Goodsell, who jumped out of her car, which was being driven ahead of the Durant, when she heard the crash.

NEW YORK TO HAVE AERIAL POLICE PATROL.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Four aerial beats will soon be part of New York's police routine.

Commissioner Whalen said four Amphibian planes would be purchased and patrols established at Coney Island, the Rockaways, Jamaica Bay and on Long Island Sound. This action followed several recent airplane crashes in the city in which several persons were killed. An appropriation of $100,000 is to be asked.

Trial for Mickey Walker October 7.

Los Angeles, Sept. 11 (AP).—Mickey Walker, middleweight boxing champion, was at liberty today on $300 bail pending a jury trial October 7 on charges of possession of liquor, to which he pleaded not guilty. Ray Hallor and Arthur Housman, actors, who were arrested with Walker at a Hollywood apartment house, where the three allegedly were holding a noisy drinking party, also pleaded not guilty and had trials set for the same date. George Sweeney, film director, a fourth defendant, pleaded guilty and was fined $300. Monday Walker pleaded guilty to intoxication charges and paid a fine of $25.

Is "Nearly Glad" He Was Arrested

Newcastle, Wyo., Sept. 11 (AP).—C. D. Waggoner, President of the Bank of Telluride, Col., sought in connection with financial manipulations involving $500,000, was in jail here today.

The banker was arrested last night at a tourist camp eight miles north of here, where he had registered under his own name. He said he had made no attempt to conceal his identity and was driving his own car.

Sheriff Carl Howell said Waggoner admitted the coup by which six New York banks, after receiving faked telegraphic orders from Denver, deposited $500,000 to his credit in the Chase National Bank of New York. He refused to discuss the motive behind the transaction. He made it clear, however, that he alone was responsible for the manipulations.

Waggoner declared he had "thought out the whole scheme carefully ahead of time." He said he had been travelling in the Dakotas, Nebraska and Wyoming, and that he was "nearly glad" he had been arrested. He said he expected to go to jail "for the rest of my life" for his speculations and declared he "might not even retain an attorney" if he were removed to Denver or New York to face charges of grand larceny.

Several days after the transaction was discovered, authorities at Denver and Colorado bank officials advanced the theory that Waggoner manipulated to pay off depositors in his bank. The bank was closed last week following the discovery of the announcement that Waggoner was missing.

Investigators at Denver announced one of the obligations cleared by Waggoner's manipulations was a $100,000 loan to the Norwood Cattle Loan Company of which Waggoner was president, but J. C. Anderson, secretary of the company, declared the company had not benefited a cent by the transaction.

Chief Wood At Police Meeting

Chief of Police J. Allan Wood attended the police conference Tuesday in New York city at which time Police Commissioner Whalen acted as host to police chiefs of 76 communities from neighboring cities in New York state, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

The entertainment of the visitors began with an inspection of police headquarters, including the line-up and view of police rookies doing their gymnastic exercises.

Following the morning program the party went to the Bankers' Club, where in a round-table discussion the police chiefs discussed various ways in which the cities represented might cooperate in suppressing crime. Commissioner Whalen expressed his opinion that wonders could be worked in the area represented. In a short time he stated there would be a hook-up between the 76 police headquarters.

Matters Before The Surrogate

Five daughters and two sons are legatees in $5 each and the residue of the estate of Rachel A. Clegg, town of Plattekill, is to be invested for benefit of husband of deceased. The will executed February 1, 1929, has been admitted to probate in surrogate's court. Maker died February 28, 1929. Value of estate is given as $2,000, being a bank account. John C. Clegg and Samuel J. Clegg are named as executors and trustees. Jacob A. Decker, Newburgh, is attorney for the petitioners.

Albany Avenue Baptist Church.

The mid-week service at the Albany Avenue Baptist Church will open this week on Thurday evening at 7:30. The topic will be "Summer Experiences," and all are urged to be present. This coming Sunday will be Home-coming Sunday in the Bible School in preparation for Rally Day, and all teachers and pupils are expected to be present. A souvenir will be given to all who come, and a different program will give a special character to the occasion.

Can't Find Johnny Goodman.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 11 (AP)—What has become of Johnny Goodman, the 20-year-old Omaha golfer who dethroned Bobby Jones? Members of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce and Lakewood Country Club, of which Johnny is a member, planned a huge "blowout" for Johnny. Telegrams have been sent to him in California, but no answers have been received. The last messages were undelivered.

Expect Many at Masonic Barbecue

That there will be a large attendance at the Masonic Barbecue on Saturday, September 14, at Forsyth Park, is vouched for by Senator A. H. Wicks, who is chairman of the ticket committee. This group of Masons has been busy selling tickets to their friends, who are promised one of the best times that they ever had.

A program that will please dad, mother and all the children has been arranged. There will be various games and contests, which will give those who attend the barbecue a chance to work up a sharp appetite. According to the menu one will have to be extraordinarily hungry to eat all that the Masons have included in the meal.

The barbecue dinner will be served from 1 to 5 p. m. in the grove at Forsyth Park, which is a pleasant place for anyone to sit down to the excellent bill of fare that will be served by an efficient corps of waiters. Matters will be arranged so that there will be no waiting and everyone will receive prompt and courteous service.

Those who have not purchased tickets for the barbecue are advised to do so as early as possible. It will serve not only to assure one a place at the Masonic tables, but will help the committees in charge to prepare for all in a most thorough manner. Half-rate tickets for children are being sold.

"A jolly time and plenty for everybody" is the Masons' slogan for the barbecue Saturday.

CHARGES PRISON OFFICIALS AND OFFICERS ROBBED HIM

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 11 (AP).—An investigation at the instance of Governor C. C. Young into charges by Count Albert Sichofsky, Polish adventurer, that large sums of his money disappeared while he was held in Folsom prison and in the Los Angeles county jail, was in the making here today.

On receipt of word from New York that Sichofsky, who was taken there recently for deportation after serving a sentence at Folsom, had obtained a writ of Habeas Corpus returnable September 17 on the strength of his story that he had been stripped of his wealth and was being rushed out of the country without a chance to regain it, Governor Young yesterday announced that he would ask the state prison board to investigate.

Sichofsky, characterized by the United States Department of Labor as one of the most dangerous criminals ever to enter this country, asked to be released from Ellis Island in New York so he might return to California and prosecute claims for more than $200,000 against prison officials and prosecuting officers.

The Count charged that while serving a sentence on a bunko charge, Thomas A. Gannon, former member of the state prison board, advised him to pay out $16,680 to satisfy the costs and verdict of an alleged civil action against the adventurer. Sichofsky said he subsequently learned $12,680 of this sum went to Gannon.

NO ALLIANCE WITH UNITED STATES IS CONTEMPLATED

Durham, Eng., Sept. 11 (AP).—Emphatic statement that naval reduction negotiations between Great Britain and the United States do not contemplate an alliance between the two countries was made in a speech here last night by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

"We are making no alliance with America," he said. "That ought to be clearly stated. America is much too wise to make alliances with any European power, unless the alliance is in the form of an agreement to use moral influences and to establish peace."

He was optimistic as to the ultimate outcome of the negotiations, which he said were more conversations than negotiations. "I do not think I can call them negotiations exactly, but we are preparing."

"We are not going to run like a bull at a hedge and then find when we have prepared the stage that we have begun without completely understanding each other. I am optimistic, as I have always been, because the volume of world public opinion that is supporting both nations is so strong that I do not believe we can fail."

Has Branch Plant in Kingston.

Sale of the $8,000,000 holdings of the Hudson Valley Coke and Products Corporation to the Niagara-Hudson Power Corporation was approved by owners of 80% of the stock at a stockholders' meeting at Troy Tuesday. Sale of the assets is in accordance with terms of an agreement accepted August 5 by the directors of the corporation. The corporation manufactures coke, gas and by-products. A branch plant is maintained on Cedar street, this city, for the sale of coke.

Police Guard for Witness.

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—J. F. Dowd, a state witness in the drive against bucket shops, has been given a police guard following threats that gangsters intended to kill him because of his revelations to authorities. Dowd, 30-year-old head of C. F. Dowd and Company, exposed the system used by the bucketeers in getting hundreds of thousands of dollars from gullible investors.

Says Farmer Can't Shift Tax Burden

Saranac Inn., N. Y., Sept. 11 (AP).—Arguing that a carefully prepared income tax is the most equitable tax yet devised, Stanley M. Powell, manager of the Ingleside Farm at Ionia, Mich., told National Tax Association delegates here today that the general property tax pinches both farmer and city home owners and renters. Both classes should join, he said, in an effort to secure tax readjustment and relief.

"One of the most grievous features of the heavy taxes borne by agriculture is that the farmer has no power to pass any portion of them on or shift them in any way, as he has so little to say concerning the price which he receives for the product of his labors," said Powell. "Increased taxes under antiquated and ill-adapted tax systems, have been accompanied by a pronounced drop in farm incomes and the sale value of farm property. The farmer does not ask for special consideration, but for an early start upon the long journey which eventually will work for the general welfare."

Powell advocated three steps toward securing relief: more efficiency in local government through adoption of administrative reforms and prevenion of duplication in the functions of the various units and offices; improved machinery for the administration of the general property tax and acceptance by the state, to a large extent, of the responsibility of financing highways and schools, thus relieving the local units of the responsibility.

"Each state should adopt," he said, "a compulsory system of standard forms for budgets and require uniform accounting and provide for hearings and review of local budgets and bond issues."

More efficient methods of assessing farm property said Whitney Coombs, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, constitutes one of the most pressing requisites of a program of farm tax reform.

Crop Decline Due To Dry Weather

Albany, Sept. 11 (AP)—Dry weather during August was responsible for decline in the prospects for several New York state crops, and practically no improvement in others, according to the state-federal crop report issued by the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Corn, although light, promises about the same as last year. Spring wheat and barley are much below the 1928 output, and oats, with 24,745,000 bushels, is only three-quarters of last year's production. Buckwheat declined sharply from the August forecast, and is only slightly above last season's small crop.

The potato crop, with about 25,121,000 bushels, compares with 32,376,000 bushels last year. In eastern New York and in some of the western counties the vines are in bad shape. In other sections some improvement can take place if frost holds off and other conditions are favorable. The Long Island potato crop is only 3,696,000 bushels, compared with 7,132,000 bushels a year ago.

Apples, peaches and pears are much below last year's output, while grapes, with 78,854 tons in sight, compare with 85,470 tons last year.

INJURED WHEN BUS GOES OVER EMBANKMENT

Flat Rock, Mich., Sept. 11 (AP).—Eighteen persons were injured, none seriously, when a Cleveland to Detroit Greyhound bus left the road and plunged over an eight-foot embankment early today a half mile south of here.

The driver of the bus told Flat Rock police something went wrong with the steering gear and that he lost control. There were 20 passengers on the bus.

Among the injured were Frank Smith, Erie, Pa., and Mrs. Mabel Bowman, Waterford, Pa., and Miss Rose A. Kasper, Millworth, Pa.

104 Doukhobors Get Six Months.

Nelson B. C., Sept. 11 (AP).—Outwitting Doukhobor pickets about the jail, authorities spirited more than 100 members of the cult aboard a train for Vancouver to serve six month jail sentences. Two coaches and a baggage car were used to transport 104 Doukhobor men and women sentenced to jail for indecent exposure for taking part in a nude procession. In addition to the prisoners the party included eight children being taken to an institution where they will attend school. They were taken from Doukhobor parents who refused to send them to public schools.

Found Mentally Unbalanced.

Tuesday Deputy Sheriff P. W. Wells of Stone Ridge was called to Atwood where a Brooklyn man was acting in a strange manner. Taken before Dr. Sherman, the man was examined and pronounced mentally unbalanced. He was given in the custody of a brother for transportation to Brooklyn.

Arrested for Reckless Driving.

Isidor Swirker of High Falls was arrested Sunday by Deputy Sheriff P. W. Wells on a charge of reckless driving. An adjournment in the matter was taken until September 14. The charge is that defendant forced a car off the highway causing it to overturn.

Poles to Honor General Pulaski

October 13 Set By Local Committee As Date of Celebration Here—Special History of Pulaski Prepared.

The 150th anniversary of General Casimir Pulaski's death at Savannah, Ga., will be given official recognition by the United States government on October 9 and several days following, when those of Polish birth and ancestry will observe in most fitting manner the memory of the great patriot's deeds in fighting for America's cause during the Revolutionary War.

In the city of Savannah and Washington, D. C., there will be elaborate celebrations, while those of Polish ancestry in this city will sponsor fitting events to commemorate the deeds of their kin, who helped to make the United States a free and independent nation. October 13 has been set by a local committee as the day when this city will honor the memory of General Pulaski. A tentative program has been framed but as several changes may occur it will not be announced until a later date.

To recall the works of General Pulaski to those who learned of his deeds in U. S. History while at school and to give others who are not so familiar with the great Polish soldier a chance to read of his aid to the Colonial cause during the revolution, the committee on planning the celebration in his honor prepared the following:

Pulaski went to Paris where he became acquainted with Benjamin Franklin, who at that time endeavored to secure the help of France in the struggle of the American colonists against England. Benjamin Franklin made a profound impression upon the youthful warrior, who from now on made the cause of American liberty his own. His sole object now became to fight with the American colonists in their struggle for independence and having provided himself with considerable means from his patrimony in Poland, through the assistance of influential friends, he embarked for America with his inseparable friend Rogowski, where he arrived in March, 1777. He immediately joined the staff of General Washington, then in Philadelphia.

Pulaski's reputation had preceded him. Although quite young, he was known as a man of unblemished honor and sterling character and his fame as a soldier and skilled swordsman was unequalled. Henry Sienkiewicz, famous author of the "Trilogy", took Casimir Pulaski as the model for "Pan Michael", whose marvelous swordsmanship many readers will remember from reading the work of that title by the immortal Sienkiewicz.

It is recorded in history, that a famous swordsman and duelist was induced by the Russians to provoke a duel with Pulaski, his enemies hoping that he could not escape with his life in an encounter with the swashbuckling Frenchman. The duel was soon arranged and gladly accepted by Pulaski. The Frenchman, certain of victory, recommended to Pulaski to say his prayers for the repose of his soul because in a few moments he would be without a head, to which Pulaski coolly replied: "And I advise you to count the buttons on your uniform and then your head, you will lose one after the other." The result was as predicted by Pulaski. His incredible skill with the sword left him without a scratch from his opponent from whose uniform Pulaski cut every front button and then with a mighty stroke severed his head from the shoulders.

Thus will be seen that George Washington, in taking Pulaski as a member of his staff made a valuable acquisition, not only of a valiant and experienced soldier but also of a man of means who needed no assistance and who expected none from his newly found American friends. His high ideals and love of liberty had prompted him to cross the ocean to America, where, in a strange land, amidst strange and, at times, unfriendly surroundings and people, his unselfish devotion to the cause of the oppressed, his most engaging personality and his soldierly qualities marked him at once as a man of distinction.

It is known that his military activities in the Revolutionary War extended over the short period of a little more than two years, but even in that brief time, General Pulaski, although barely 30 years old, made a record which should forever enshrine him in the history of our country as one of the most heroic and lovable figures of the Revolutionary period.

In a letter addressed to the Continental Congress on August 24th, 1777, General Pulaski writes: "The most important favor for which I ask is to find myself in the closest proximity to the enemy, so that I may gain a reputation of a good officer." He requested a commission of the Continental Congress, but not receiving the same immediately, he did not wait for a reply but hastened to join Washington's army on the eve of the Battle of Bradywine.

In the light of historical records as now before us, there can be no doubt that had it not been for the impetuous attack of General Pulaski leading the American and French cavalry, a mere handful, at best, upon the English columns under the commands of Generals Knyphausen and Cornwallis, the Colonists already in defeat, would have been defeated at Brandywine and American history might have been different from what it is today. General Sullivan's army was in full retreat be-

Kingston Merchants Will Attend Rondout Valley Chamber of Commerce Dinner

New fall styles in clothing and other forms of merchandise will be presented to the Kingston public October 10, 11 and 12, it was decided at a meeting of the Uptown Merchants' Association held at McCabe's restaurant Tuesday evening, following a turkey dinner.

Previous to the opening, which will take place at 8 p. m., the merchants will veil their windows. The opening program will include several prize events, as well as a surprise which has never before been presented in Kingston.

On recommendation of the organization it was decided to donate $50 to the American Mechanics Band in appreciation of its part in the Dollar Day program held recently.

The usual discussion of the parking situation brought the usual conclusion that the merchants would ask their employes to refrain from parking on the business streets, so that customers might use the space. It was decided that one hour parking would not be advantageous to the merchants' interests and that plan, which had formerly been discussed, was dropped. But it will be discussed again, many times, and dropped, and discussed, as in the past.

The new plan of having the merchants cooperate in the parking problem was presented by Sam Bernstein, Jr., and Joseph Kramer. In addition to clearing the streets of the merchants' automobiles, it was decided to place signs pointing to city parking places, including that behind the Rose and Gorman store, at points where they would be of the most value to out-of-town persons wishing to trade in Kingston. Discussion was also held concerning the building of welcome signs to be placed at advantageous points on the country roads.

On the presentation of a motion of E. Frank Flanagan, it was decided to invite the automobile dealers to join the fall display program.

An invitation to the merchants to attend a dinner to be held by the Rondout Valley Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of furthering the interest of the entire valley, the principal road through which terminates in Kingston, was presented by Vincent Gorman. The organization voted to cooperate with the Chamber of Commerce in this program. The dinner will be held on October 1, at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

The meeting closed with a discussion of plans for Christmas lighting. Morris Kaplan, president of the organization, presided over the meeting for the first time and gave great satisfaction.

CHARGES THAT MAGISTRATE WAS BEATEN TO DEATH.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—A charge that a police magistrate who died several weeks ago, supposedly of a heart attack, was severely beaten the same day for declining to pay $30,000 for reappointment, was made at a political rally last night.

Edward V. Broderick, who is contesting the power of Andrew B. Keating, Tammany leader on the upper west side, said Magistrate Andrew Macrery, who had been reappointed for a ten-year term a week before his death, had been unable to raise the $30,000 demanded.

Broderick said Wallace Macrery, a brother, planned to ask an investigation by the district attorney's office and the exhumation of his brother's body.

Magistrate Macrery died on August 21 at the office of Dr. Max Greenwald, where he was taken after complaining of illness during a conference with several associates. Dr. Greenwald declared last night it was "ridiculous to think that there was anything suspicious in the death."

Louis Marshall Dies In Zurich

Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 11 (AP).—The correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency here reported today that Louis Marshall, prominent Jewish philanthropist of New York city, died at 3 p. m. (9 a. m. E. S. T.) of an affection of the pancreas.

Mr. Marshall had been seriously ill for several weeks. He was stricken in Zurich while on a vacation in Europe. Because of his advanced age, he lost strength rapidly following a pancreas operation. He was 73 years old.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Relatives here were notified of the death today of Louis Marshall, New York attorney and philanthropist, in Zurich, Switzerland.

Marshall was among those identified with the controversy between Henry Ford and American Jews, when Hebrews of the country charged the automobile manufacturer with printing material "slanderous to the Jewish people" in his magazine, The Dearborn Independent.

In 1927 Marshall announced he had the original statement signed by Ford announcing withdrawal of anti-Jewish material from the Dearborn Independent. Later, as president of the American Jewish Committee, he made public a letter sent by the committee to Ford accepting his offer of a public renunciation of "the anti-Jewish campaign carried on" in the magazine.

Some time afterward he warned Jews not to go to extremes in thanking and congratulating the automobile manufacturer for his apology.

Charges British With Conspiracy

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—The United States Navigation Company is seeking an injunction against 13 British lines, which include the Cunard and White Star Line, accusing them of numerous illegal practices and of being in combination to restrain American foreign trade.

The complaint asserts that the United States Company carries less than five per cent of the trans-Atlantic trade and charges that the British lines are seeking to squeeze it out of the business entirely.

Employment of coercive measures to compel shippers to patronize the defendant lines and prevent shipment by the American line is charged. These measures, the American Company asserts, include refusal of the British lines to carry shipments for exporters who give any of their business to the United States Navigation Company.

Heavy Rainfall Flattens Corn

Residents of the town of Rochester attending county court as jurors stated this morning at the court house that town was visited by one of the most severe rains of the summer. The rain lasted over half an hour, the water falling in torrents. It was especially severe in the Kerhonkson and Accord section and fields of standing corn were knocked down flat to the ground by the force of the rain, there being no wind.

Textile Strike Settled.

Marion, N. C., Sept. 11 (AP).—Striking union textile workers, some of whom have been unemployed for nearly two months, were free today to return to their jobs in the Marion Manufacturing Company and the Clinchfield Mills after the calling off of the strike last night by officials of the United Textile Workers of America. Settlement of the strike was announced last night, with a 55-hour week forming the basis.

Kuru Dead May Reach 145.

Helingsfors, Finland, Sept. 11 (AP).—The number of persons missing in the Kuru steamship disaster Saturday continually increases and the number of dead is officially stated to be 120. An unofficial estimate is 145. Only 48 bodies have been recovered. The steamer is in an upright position in fifty feet of water just outside the harbor of Tamerfors, where it sank in a storm.

Trigo Wins $60,000 St. Leger.

Doncaster, England, Sept. 11 (AP).—Trigo, owned by W. Barnett and winner of the Epsom derby, today captured the St. Leger stakes, worth $60,000. Bosworth was second and Horus was third. Fourteen horses ran. Trigo won by a short head from Bosworth. The betting was 5 to 1 against Trigo, 9 to 1 against Bosworth, and 25 to 1 against Horus.

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 11 (AP).—Captain of a Chinese river steamer arriving here today said Soviet troops yesterday bombarded the village of Kuochiatien. Many persons were killed or wounded.

KINGSTON HOSPITAL REFUSES USUAL COURTESIES

Inquiry at the Kingston Hospital this morning in regard to the extent of the injuries sustained by Chester DeGraff of Port Ewen, who was struck by a bus Tuesday, and as to his present condition was met with a reply by the hospital authorities that they would give out no information in regard to the extent of injuries sustained by persons injured in accident cases. The hospital official stated that there was a rule at the hospital which would not permit the giving of any information in regard to injuries to persons admitted to the hospital.

Baltimore Celebrates Anniversary.

Baltimore, Sept. 11 (AP).—Baltimore dressed up today, preparing for the celebration of its 200th anniversary, which will begin tomorrow and continue until Sunday. The anniversary of the September 12 bombardment in which the guns of Fort McHenry kept a British fleet from descending on Baltimore, a battle remembered principally because it was the occasion of the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner," was chosen for the official opening in the first day's program will be ceremonies at Fort McHenry under the auspices of the Society of the War of 1812. General Charles P. Summerall, Chief of Staff of the Army, will be the principal speaker.

Matters Before Health Board

At the regular meeting of the Board of Health held Tuesday evening in the city hall building Miss Anna C. Cassidy, Junior League welfare nurse, reported that the League would not continue the serving of milk to families in the city as its funds for that purpose was exhausted. She also stated that other agencies which helped in the work found it impossible to continue paying for the milk. Mayor Dempsey when informed that these families would need milk for some time stated that if the Junior League would continue serving the milk he would see that the bills would be paid by organizations which had a charity fund.

"DRY" AGENTS AND TROOPERS RAID TAMARAC LODGE.

At 1 o'clock Sunday morning federal agents and State Troopers descended upon Tamarac Lodge on the Highland-NewPaltz highway and staged a raid. The agents located what they allege was a large quantity of applejack, gin, Scotch and rye whiskey and a quantity of beer. The liquors were seized by the agents and Mrs. Florence Coffey, alleged proprietor of the place, was placed under arrest on a charge of possession and sale.

Mrs. Coffey was brought to the county jail for the night and later was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Connelly who held her in $500 bail. Samples were taken for analysis and for evidence in the case.

the popular Daggett and Ramsdell cosmetics in a totally new costume . . . we would have improved the creams and lotions too were it possible . . but they have always been made of the very finest ingredients . . . to agree with most skins . . . . but now you get them in their modern de luxe dress . . white . . and grey . . . and silver . . and crystal . . . accented with black and smartly monogrammed . . . oh, you are going to like them . . . and they cost you no more than the old packages. You are invited to stop in at your favorite store and see them . . They are now on display all over town.

These are the original Daggett and Ramsdell Products in a new modern dress. The products themselves have in no way been changed.

Like Cinderella at the ball, Perfect Cold Cream emerges in its new dress as the loveliest cold cream imaginable, perfect as its name implies. Only Cinderella has a twin this time—Perfect Vanishing Cream in an identical jar, and just as much sought after, too.

Next comes Vivatone, the perfect skin tonic and astringent . . . only three years old, but already capturing all hearts with its charm. In a chic new flagon with silvery top. And the latest arrival of all—Perfect Cleansing Cream is creating a great stir in smart circles.

Quaint Old Home of Hawthorne May Be Made a Literary Shrine

The old New England home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, "Wayside", is planned as a shrine for the nation. Hawthorne, shown in the drawing, often stood to write, using a shelf as indicated in the sketch.

By JOHN B. KNOX.
(AP Feature Service Writer.)

Concord, Mass. (AP).—"Wayside", a rambling old New England house which has the distinction of being the only home Nathaniel Hawthorne ever owned, may be saved as a literary shrine for the American public.

The ancient wooden buildings more than two centuries old and possessing an endowment of literary associations left by three authors, has been opened to the public as an experiment.

The Concord Antiquarian Society hopes to ascertain within the next few weeks whether public interest will warrant the raising of money to purchase and preserve the property.

The rich literary associations began before Hawthorne's occupancy. The Alcott family bought the house in 1845—when it was begun no one is certain—and here Louisa May Alcott played as a girl with her sisters. Impressions she gained at that time went into the writing of "Little Women".

The Alcotts called the place "Hillside", but when Hawthorne bought it in 1852 he renamed it "Wayside".

Hawthorne made many changes but his outstanding addition was a "tower" rising above the house. The tower is just a large, square study. To this study, it is said, Hawthorne climbed a ladder through a dark and narrow passage.

Then, to insure privacy, according to tradition, he closed a trap door and placed his chair on top of it. A narrow, dark stairway later replaced the ladder. Sometimes he stood and wrote on a shelf desk near one window.

Hawthorne's son, Julian, and later his daughter, Mrs. Rose Lathrop, lived in the place after his death. Still later, it passed to George Parsons Lothrop, Boston publisher, whose wife was known as an author under the name "Margaret Sidney". Most of Mrs. Lothrop's work on "Five Little Peppers" was done in this house.

Mrs. Lothrop's daughter, present owner, has said she will sell the place.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Smart Frock for Street or Sports Wear.

6546. This style comprises a waist lightly bloused above a circular skirt. The V neck may be finished with collar and revers facing or without this finish, as pictured in the small views, which also show the back cut in low V outline, a very popular mode for sports wear. The sleeve is a fitted model, and may be omitted. Crepe was used in this instance. Handkerchief or printed linen is also suggested. Silk and wool tweed, Aberdine and gingham are also good for this model.

The pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. To make the dress, with sleeves, collar and revers for a 38-inch size will require 3¾ yards of 39-inch material. If made without sleeves 3 yards will be required. To face revers, and collar with contrasting material will require ½ yard 39 inches wide and cut crosswise. The width of the dress at the lower edge with fulness extended is 2 1-3 yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Fashion Book Notice.

Send 15c in silver or stamps for our Up-to-Date Fall and Winter 1929-1930 Book of Fashions, showing color plates, and containing 500 designs of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various, simple stitches) all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Pigs as Currency

A traveler who has returned to England from the Pacific has been telling some amusing stories of things that go on in the New Hebrides. Pigs, he says, are not only eaten on a large scale, but they are the standard currency in the island. There are certain ceremonies at which it is very important to have pigs, and they are frequently borrowed. The men who lend pigs are like money lenders, demanding interest on their loan, and when the pig is paid back it must be the size the pig that was loaned would have grown to during the time it was borrowed.

Whitman's "Ballyhoo"

Walt Whitman, writes Harvey O'Higgins in Harper's Magazine, at the time his first book of poems appeared, ballyhooed himself, anonymously, in the American Phrenological Journal as the "haughtiest of writers that has ever yet written and printed a book." And in the United States and Democratic Review, for the same month of September, 1855, he hailed himself anonymously, as "one of the roughs, large, proud, affectionate, his costume manly and free, his face sunburnt and bearded, his postures strong and erect."

Mystery of Sleep

Science has evolved drugs that will put one to sleep, but just what it is that brings natural sleep is as great a mystery today as it was to the caveman who curled up on his rock mattress, with his flowing beard spread over him for a quilt.

It is a commentary on human nature that we are more particular about our food than we are about regular hours of sleep, yet it is a fact, definitely established, that it is possible to live much longer without food than without the benign embrace of Morpheus.

True Greatness

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinions; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Grace J. Austin.

There is an old king of garment materials whose realm has varied much with different years and centuries. His name is King Velvet. He has made cloaks for queens and great emperors like Napoleon. If we can believe what we read, there were long periods when the better dressed men wore a great deal of velvet. But at present, unless in the kin-material of a corduroy smoking coat, or a lounging robe, men have not much use for velvet. Still, it may return, for there are cycles in clothes as well as stars.

In some years King Velvet has hibernated for a season like a bear, only his sleeping time has been in summer. This season he has felt more energetic and has kept his presence felt in summer evening coats of the soft transparent variety.

Wholesale merchants are declaring there will be "great activity" in King Velvet's realm during the fall and winter. This old king must in recent years have been taking some of the fashionable courses in physical education, for while of old time he cared merely to appear at ceremonious affairs, now he forms effective spectator sports wear for the autumn, and his material is entirely proper for any afternoon affair, unless it is a cross-country hike.

Paris and some of the fashion developers in this country are calling in siren tones to gowns, "Come down in length!" Whether the American girl and woman will submit to the bondage of six inches or more added to the length of the skirt, is a question. When Phidias and the other ancient sculptors desired to make a statue of Diana, the goddess of the fields and outdoor sports, they gave her a good representation of a modern knee-length kilt skirt. Diana is a good patron goddess for most feminines in these days, and Diana certainly knew what garb was an aid to the active life.

There is one special thing to remember about velvet, and that is that as old New England thrifty folk used to say, in economic buying, it is "trimmed in the piece." Velvet is velvet, as much as ever "pigs is pigs," and there is always a feeling that something superfluous has been done if trimming has been sewed upon it.

This does not affect such additions as lace collars or jewels (even costume jewelry) for lace and jewelry have been the traditional accompaniments of velvet, but they are to be regarded as accessories rather than trimming. Have you ever noticed that wonderful women of dignity and position have quite generally had their portraits painted when wearing black velvet and a lace collar? One of the most perfect wedding descriptions that came to Dame Fashion in the spring was of a white velvet bridal gown with pearl necklace and lace veil.

If there is a fox scarf in your closet, put his head to your ear, and if you imagine quite hard, he will bark out, "Wear me this fall with a velvet suit or gown!"

Figured Crepe de Chine Features Chic Ensemble

Showing a colorful ensemble of a figured crepe de chine skirt with a navy blue blouse. The belt, cuffs and vestee are of the same material as the skirt. The model, which is for fall wear, comes from the Austrian capital.

Green Is Popular Color; Used in Jewelry Also

Nearly every shade of green is acceptable this season, although leaf green, sea green and nile green predominate. Even the blues, which for a time had their day, are taking on a distinctly greenish tinge. This is reflected in the costume jewelry also. Huge green glass bangles adorn many a wrist, and jade is exceedingly fashionable. The topazes are coming in for their share of attention, however, as is amber, which matches the modern woman's skin.

Wisdom and Ignorance

The chief difference between a wise man and an ignorant one is, not that the first is acquainted with regions invisible to the second, away from common sight and interest, but that he understands the common things which the second only sees.—King.

LINTON DANCE STUDIO TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

The Linton Dance Studio, 84 Main street, will open on Monday, September 16, when classes in ballroom dancing are to start. Harry Linton, former theatrical man, who is known as an accomplished dancer, is the proprietor of the school and will give personal instruction. He conducted his school here last year and trained a number of Kingston's young folks in the art of dancing. The studio was closed during the summer months while Mr. Linton was in Shandaken, where he was the prominent host at Linton's Log Lodge.

DR. CRISPELL ADDRESSES SCHOOL NO. 8 P.-T. A. MEETING.

A very interesting meeting of the P.-T. A. of School No. 8 was held Tuesday. Some of the pupils from the second and third grades rendered a song. Miss Lila Herrick played a piano solo which was very pleasing. Dr. Crispell's talk on mental hygiene of children was both instructive and helpful. Miss F. Hayes read the Parent-Teacher creed. Our president, Mrs. H. H. Clearwater, gave a report of the spring conference at Poughkeepsie. Refreshments were served. The large attendance was very gratifying.

Church Social at North Marbletown.

On Thursday, September 12, weather permitting, starting at 5:30 o'clock daylight saving time, the ladies of the North Marbletown Church will hold a social on the church lawn. There will be ice cream, cake and soft drinks for sale. An extra attraction of the evening will be a gypsy who will tell fortunes. She will tell you all those things you've been wanting to hear about.

THE MOTOR-BUS MENACE.

The motor-bus was gladly welcomed by a large part of the traveling public. Many not only found it convenient but regarded it as safer than the automobile because the threat of its size and weight tended to keep everything on the road out of its way—not reflecting that this in itself might result in drivers careless of the rights of smaller vehicles and thus reckless of danger. But recent crashes between motor-buses and other cars with tragic casualties, for which the former are blamed, have caused the motor-bus to become the target of severe and possibly just criticism. It is now being described in the public prints not only as a menace but as "tyrant of the highway." Thus a leading journal of the second city in the east, discussing the "road-hogging bus," from which "there is no safeguard and no escape," indignantly declares:

These huge vehicles make their schedules regardless of congestion, speed laws and driving rules. They cut in and out of line at will. They roar along at fifty miles an hour between the two lanes of traffic. Their common habit is to take the center of the highway and hold it, relying on their warning signals to clear the way. A vehicle with the destructive force of an army tank and the speed of an express train—that is the modern motor-bus as it is operated today on crowded highways.

Although the impartial observer is not ready to believe that this is true of all bus drivers, the reports tend to show that it is literally true of many, and the newspaper quoted well says that "there is no more urgent safety problem than the control" of the careless brobdingnag of the highway. The big motor-bus, speeding recklessly through heavy traffic, is due for a stern official reckoning.

CHAIN STORES AND OTHERS.

Chain stores, according to Harry E. Martin, who runs the Chain Store Review, will not drive individual merchants out of business. Chain store efficiency, however, "is forcing the small individuals into larger associations which have greater buying power comparable to that of chains, and is forcing the small merchant to develop a merchandising efficiency he seldom showed before". Thus the individual merchant may find his salvation in some such way as the individual farmer—by improving his own system and working in voluntary association with others of his kind.

This seems to mean the end of individual merchandising in the old sense. One merchant by himself can no longer be absolutely independent. Yet through cooperation he may survive and prosper. Which is fortunate all around.

Individuality is one of the biggest human values. We need individual business men and the personal, human service they can render, just as we need highly efficient organizations working on a vast scale.

Henry Ford may have been talking carelessly, or been misunderstood a little, when he told the mayor of Detroit, as the latter says, that he would take the city's garbage problem off its hands. That would mean a clean saving of about $2,000,000 now spent by Detroit for the collection and disposal of garbage. Yet there need be little doubt that Mr. Ford, or some other big industrialist, could do it if he set his mind to it. The handling of garbage by most communities is an economic absurdity. Garbage is a gold mine to those who know how to do the mining. It contains, nearly always, wealth in the form of fats, fertilisers and marketable chemicals, more than enough to pay the cost of reduction. There is as much wealth wasted in garbage as in sewage; and anyone who has any doubts as to the latter should read Victor Hugo's eye-opening chapter about the sewers of Paris, in "Les Miserables". Some day we shall utilize the full value of both.

Results gained by Dr. Otto Klineberg in testing children have a surprise or two. Among children of Nordic, Alpine and Mediterranean stock in European countries, he found no appreciable difference in intelligence along racial lines. In other words, he found no superiority among the Nordics, or northwestern European stock, as compared with south European stock. He also found that city children of all three stocks were more intelligent than country children. What becomes, then, of our American tradition that country stock is the brightest and best?

While the Baxley, Ga., high school "literary" society proudly debated whether "the hydrant is more beneficial than the pump," it appears that the obviously more romantic Phi Delta Literary Society of Atlanta "resolved that it is easier to make love in a Ford than in a buggy."

Washington society is reported to be "growing fidgety" over the coming visit of the British Prime Minister, not knowing where Mrs. Gann will insist on being seated at the banquet. But she could hardly demand more than the right of the distinguished visitor.

A "decided decline" in the attendance at the baseball parks this year has been reported. And now the question is, are automobiles and the movies going to more or less hamstring the national game also?

A candidate for the Augusta, Ga., city council is modest yet persuasive. In his advertising announcement he said: "I know I'm not worth much, but why vote for less?"

Mere man is inclined to wonder how feminine logic manages to accept the combination of no stockings to keep cool and a fur neckpiece to keep warm.

TYPES OF FAST HEART.

In examining recruits for overseas service we often came across young chaps who were "volunteering" their services and yet were so nervous that the heart rate was running as high as 100, even up to 140 beats to the minute.

They were requested to return in a few days, and in the majority of cases the heart was still beating very rapidly.

When given exercise, such as stationary running, or hopping, the heart beat did not increase to any extent, and was back to its normal point in the usual two minutes.

The beats were regular and most of these cases were accepted, as they were considered "normal."

There is another type of rapid heart which frightens the patient but is not really dangerous.

This is where the attack of rapid beating comes on suddenly and without warning.

The patient is cold, clammy, and collapsed. The pulse rate is extremely rapid and very regular, so that it can be accurately counted up to 250 beats per minute. This rate whatever it be, is not affected by motion, or other disturbance, as is the rate in a normal heart, and will be maintained continuously for minutes or hours.

The attack stops as suddenly as it began and generally leaves no ill effects.

Dr. Samuel E. Levine tells us that sometimes the holding of a deep breath as long as possible will give relief; painful pressure on the eyeballs helps in other cases.

However there are other cases of rapid heart in which the heart is fast and irregular, becomes more irregular and much faster after exercise, and does not return to its normal beat within two minutes.

It is these last cases that require the attention of a physician. He can advise the proper medicine if any, can advise as to exercise and rest; in fact so outline a system of living that the patient, despite this heart condition, can live safely.

So don't let a rapid heart worry you. It is usually not serious, but find out by consulting your doctor which of the three above types you happen to possess, and be guided by his advice in the matter.

Airplane Phraseology

Zoom means to climb for a short time at an angle greater than that which can be maintained in steady flight, the airplane being carried upward at the expense of kinetic energy. The term is sometimes used as a noun to denote any sudden increase in the upward slope of the flight path.

Death Treasure

by R. A. J. WALLING

SYNOPSIS: Cousin John returns! But that is the real Cousin John. Mary Grenofen, coming at Mrs. Grenofen's urgent request to amuse and distract the professional-detective, Laxton, finds John spends several days with the pseudo-archaeologist, visits the Fotheringay excavations with him and finally leaves Laxton thoroughly puzzled. Tom has another opportunity to see Veronica but learns nothing, neither of the mystery of Roger Pell and her ward, the escaped convict, nor of her entanglement with them. She reassures Tom, however, that no moral wrong is involved in their thrilling escapade and he is satisfied to ask no questions. The serenity of Woodcot is disturbed the next day when a visitor is announced—to Tom's surprise—Parson Marling.

Chapter 27

MISSING EVIDENCE

AS I was showing Marling into the studio, very wary of him, I noticed that he was paler, more solemn, more owlish than when he last sat in this room.

"I seem destined to meet you only on unpleasant business, Mr. Grenofen," he began.

"The last meeting is all washed out by what's happened since," said I.

"Could we be just candid?" said Marling. "It might be better. I've come under a strong sense of—compulsion, I'll say I have a purely friendly motive."

I made some sort of acknowledgment of Marling's friendly motive and put on a double guard of caution.

I signed to him to go on.

"I was wrong in supposing that Pell would evade the meeting at Newplace," he said. "Better for him if he had stayed away. But what I told you about Pell was right. Now, Mr. Grenofen, for some reason you have got yourself mixed up with a complicated and very dreadful business, which does not stop at the murder of Pell. And what I came to tell you, Mr. Grenofen, is that you yourself are in danger."

"In danger of what? And from whom?" I fired at him.

Marling hesitated. I watched him closely, this man who had probably escaped death only because Pell stopped the bullet intended for him, who seemed to be at the base of the whole mystery of Roger Pell. He was greatly disturbed, in deadly earnest. His eyes burned in his pale face.

"You stumbled into this," said he. "You have no real responsibility. I came to warn you."

"Of what, or of whom, padre?" I repeated.

"Of an arrest—at any minute. Of whom? Of several people, but of Laxton in particular."

"Why should any one want to arrest me? And Laxton, of all people!" I said.

Marling made a gesture of weariness.

"We needn't beat about the bush, need we?" he asked. "You must have realized what Laxton is and what he wants."

"What does he want?"

"To discover who killed Pell."

"But, my dear padre, you forget that Laxton was interested in Newplace before anybody thought of killing Pell. He promised me to come to Blackwater days before."

Marling shrugged.

"I told you, Mr. Grenofen, that you stumbled into this. I can't tell you the origins of it—but Laxton—well, he won't arrest you himself; but he'll have you arrested, simply because he doesn't believe you stumbled into it. He thinks you were in it from the first."

I looked steadily into Marling's eyes as he spoke, wondering why he had come to me with this warning.

"You'll admit, padre," said I, "that on the face of it I'm justified in being skeptical. Why should Laxton or anybody else attack me about the death of Pell rather than any other man who had anything to do with Pell?"

"I don't know that it's a good reason; but I know the reason such as it is, Mr. Grenofen. You concealed a man for two or three days in conditions which suggest that it was the man who killed Pell. You helped him to escape."

"The man we had here was introduced to Laxton on Saturday evening—mother's cousin, John Merryweather."

"Yes, I know. I'm telling you the theory," said Marling. "And I simply want to warn you that they are looking for a certain piece of evidence before they act. Let us suppose for a minute, for the sake of argument, that you had a man concealed under any pretext and he left behind him any piece of evidence which would enable them to establish his identity—well, I needn't go on with the argument. In that hypothetical case, if the evidence was not here they could not get hold of it. If you were not here, they couldn't arrest you."

Marling's manner as he said this, very deliberately, was astonishing. He literally sweated over it. I wondered whether Marling was laying a trap for me, whether Marling was easing his own conscience, whether he was fishing for information. I concluded that he was easing his conscience.

"You know," said I, "all this is most extraordinary. If you weren't a padre—"

"Don't think of me as a padre now, Mr. Grenofen, I implore you—but merely as a man who sees you in peril and wants to help you."

I could get no more out of him and he seemed to want nothing from me. In 10 minutes after his arrival he had departed.

Then I did not stay to ponder Marling's statements. I went straight to my mother to ask her what she had done with the clothes Cousin John wore when he arrived.

"Oh—you can't want those rags," said she. "They were put in my incinerator the day after and they're now supplying potash to my apple-trees."

I stared at her for a moment.

"You saw—"

"Yes," she nodded. "On a shirt."

"You think of everything," I said.

At least no telltale prison marks remained to supply Laxton with the bit of evidence he wanted.

After lunch I went across to Passage and saw Somerfield.

I told him about Marling's visit. His eyebrows went higher and higher.

"You've got a first-class mother," he remarked.

"Yes, isn't she?"

"Brain works by electricity. But yours hasn't been making contact, Grenofen, or you wouldn't be here now."

"What d'you mean, Somerfield?"

"You've said nothing about the piece of evidence Laxton's after—the black bag! Didn't you say that, when Laxton said he thought he'd met your cousin, he mentioned a black bag?"

"He did."

"And as he'd never seen any cousin at all, he must have known about the black bag. Let's get on with it quick. There must not be any black bag for Laxton to find at Woodcot—if he hasn't been there already."

"Good lord!—he wouldn't break open my safe, Somerfield!"

"You think not?" said Somerfield. "Well—I wouldn't trust him with a safe of mine. And if I were you, Grenofen, I wouldn't lose a minute."

Somerfield pulled me across in the punt and walked up to Woodcot with me. I had never really faced the question of the black bag—for the same reason that I would ask Veronica nothing. A vague fear of her answers held me back. I had the same feeling about the bag. I wanted to believe that Veronica would not deceive me and I wanted to believe that the black bag contained no evidence of deceit.

But I was afraid. I made Somerfield come into the studio with me. His company was a fortification.

"It's in there," said I, pointing to the little safe in the wall. What shall we do with it?"

"Do? Take out what's in it and burn the wretched thing."

"Oh—but it's a trust for Miss Seabroke."

"You mean to say we've no right to open it? Why—for the very sake of Veronica!"

"Veronica? Yes, I suppose you're right, Somerfield."

I locked the studio door, opened the safe and took out the bag. It was extraordinarily heavy. That weight, when I first handled it, had contributed to the fear I felt. I lifted it to a table in the window.

The secrets of the mysterious black bag are disclosed in tomorrow's chapter.

PINK OYSTER RECEIVES CERTIFICATE OF HEALTH

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 11 (AP).—The "pink oyster", after undergoing ten years of investigation, today received a clean bill of health from the state. It's as wholesome as those of normal color, chemists of the Department of Agriculture reported today.

Dealers, said the department, were afraid of the pink bivalves, usually throwing them away or destroying the whole consignment. So the chemists investigated the private life of the oyster, to determine just why it changed color.

Some persons attributed the "permanent blush" to the presence of yeasts. The chemists studied 16 samples and said no. Then it was suggested that the pink might be due to red plants which the oysters had consumed. Again the chemists set to work and again their answer was no.

They went to work then on the oyster's liver. They isolated crystals of coloring substance by the aid of solvents. "Bilirubin," they said triumphantly. Bilirubin, the coloring substance, they paused to explain, is harmless.

With that settled, Commissioner Berne A. Pyrke announced that the state-wide campaign to bring about an improvement in the quality of all oysters will be continued during the fall and winter ahead. Steady improvement in combatting adulteration of them with water was noted.

PLAN TO PLANT TREES ALONG ILLINOIS ROADSIDES

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 11 (AP).—Out of the soil may come obliteration of the signboard evil in Illinois. The plan, a state enterprise, calls for the planting of trees and shrubs at unsightly places along the highways.

The departments of public works and public welfare already have begun work. State institutions will provide most of the labor, and the trees and shrubs will be from state nurseries. Cost of the work will be comparatively slight, state authorities said.

Credited to Milton

It is supposed that Milton was the first to use the figurative expression "Silver lining in clouds." In "Comus" Milton tells of the lady lost in the wood who resolved to hope on and sees a "noble cloud turn forth its silver lining to the night." The expression means the prospect of better days, the promise of happier times, notwithstanding the present.

WHY WE DO IT

Why We Want To Lick the Fellow Who Knocks the Home Town

By MEHRAN K. THOMSON, Ph.D.
Author of "The Springs of Human Action."

We want to lick the fellow who knocks the home town because he has picked the fight and struck the first blow. When you rap a fellow's home town you are giving him a back-handed slap.

The logic runs like this: All who come from hick towns are hicks. You come from a hick town. Therefore you are a hick. The sting lies in the truth that every man is identified with the place in which he lives.

The same holds regarding a man's friends, his ideas, his hobby, his auto, his family, his job—any object or person or situation more or less closely related to himself.

Take the tin lizzie as an example. If you so much as hint that the old bus is developing asthma the proud owner will stand on his hind legs and fight with fire in his eye. He is really defending himself. Should he admit that his car is N. G. then he must also allow that he is a poor mechanic or that he lacks good judgment in selecting cars or that he cannot afford a better one.

In any case the situation is humiliating. So he defends his honor by standing up for old rattle bones. A knock in the auto is not nearly so distressing as a knock at the auto. "Ask the man who owns one" is a pretty safe bet. No matter what make car you drive it is the best. I know mine is.

There is a way of avoiding this trouble. Take the wind out of the sails of ridicule by being the first to knock the home town or the car, even as you and I prevent a bawling out, after making a blunder, by calling ourselves all kinds of a fool.

A compliment as well as a slam may be dished out in the same way. Praise a man's home town or his auto and you compliment the man himself. This principle runs all through life. When aimed at some cherished possession criticism hurts; praise pleases. In either case the force of the pain or pleasure is in direct ratio to the degree you have identified yourself with the given situation.

We want to fight the fellow who knocks our home town or tin lizzie because we have to. It is a clear case of self-defense.

THE MAN WHO DELIVERS THE GOODS
There's a man in the world who is never turned down
Wherever he chances to stray;
He gets the glad hand in the populous town
Or out where the farmers make hay.
He's greeted with pleasure on deserts of sand,
And in the deep aisles of the woods;
Wherever he goes there's a welcoming hand—
He's the man who delivers the goods.

The failures of life sit around and complain
The gods haven't treated them white;
They've lost their umbrellas whenever there's rain
And they haven't their lanterns at night.
Men tire of failures who fill with their sighs
The air of their own neighborhood;
There's a man who is greeted with love-lighted eyes—he's
The man who delivers the goods.

One fellow is lazy and watches the clock
And waits for the whistle to blow;
And one has a hammer with which he will knock;
And one tells a story of woe.
One has a grouch on, a temper that's bad,
And one is a creature of moods;
So it's time for the joyous and rollicking lad,
The man who delivers the goods.

A pretty girl wearing the very latest in bathing suits, was sitting on the beach when a young man approached her, took off his hat, remarking that it was a fine day.

"How dare you speak to me!" said the girl indignantly, "I don't know you from Adam."

"Well," returned the young man unconcernedly, "I would hardly know you from Eve."

Marie: "If you could have two wishes, what would they be?"

Viola: "Well, I'd wish for a husband."

If Your Stomach Torments You

Do This for Quick Relief:

Most digestive suffering is due to "too much acid" in the stomach causing gas, heartburn, stomach pain and other distressing symptoms. By taking a little Bisurated Magnesia after eating or whenever pain is felt, you promptly remove the cause of the trouble. Bisurated Magnesia neutralizes excess acid instantly. The digestive organs are soothed, healed and strengthened in a wonderful way, and natural healthy digestion results. Because it is so quick, so safe, so sure in ending digestive troubles, doctors recommend Bisurated Magnesia and thousands use it all over the civilized world. There is no better indigestion remedy and food corrective. You can get it in either powder or tablets at the nearest good drug store. If your stomach troubles and sourness vex you, get Bisurated Magnesia at once, and again enjoy the pleasure of care-free painless digestion.

Market For Fruits And Vegetables

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—(State Department of Agriculture and Markets)—Most fruits and vegetables were plentiful on the wholesale market today. Buying was slow and the market ruled lower.

Potatoes were the exception. Prices were on the upward trend. Long Island Green Mountain potatoes advanced to $6 per 180 pounds.

Lettuce continued plentiful. The quality was very poor. Prices ranged from 10 to 50 cents per crate of 24 heads. Stock had to be real fancy to obtain the higher price. Romaine ranged from 10 to 50 cents.

Cucumbers were very plentiful. The market was easier and trading was very slow. Prices ranged from 50 cents to $1.25 with a few at $1.50 per hamper. Dills were $1.75 to $2.

Tomatoes were in liberal supply, but some were soft and overripe and prices ranged widely. Carriers sold at $1.50 to $2.25, baskets at 25 cents to 75 cents.

Celery was plentiful. The market was dull and prices tended lower. Two-thirds crates brought $1.75-$2.25.

Cauliflower also was abundant. The demand was poor with prices lower. Most of the arrivals were in a heated condition. Crates brought 50 cents to $1.50, a few $2.25.

Fine quality huckleberries from Nova Scotia were in good demand and sold from 30 to 35 cents per quart. Blackberries brought 13 to 15 cents per pint.

State peaches were plentiful and were selling at higher prices. Bushels brought $1.50-$2.75; carriers $2.25-$3.

Apples were in moderate supply at unchanged prices.

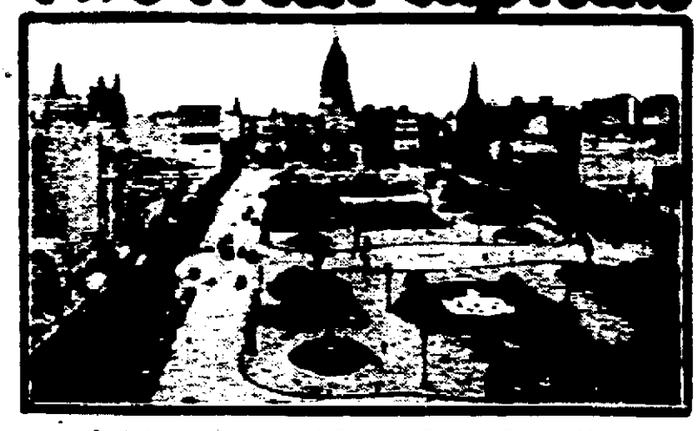
Two Great Capitals



Capital of Argentina and Congress Square, Buenos Aires.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ON OPPOSITE sides of the wide estuary of the Rio de la Plata, only a few hours steaming distance apart, lie two of South America's greatest cities, Buenos Aires, capital of Argentina, and Montevideo, capital of Uruguay.

Buenos Aires means "good airs," or "delightful breezes." If one is willing to translate less literally. The city is not merely the capital and chief port of a South American republic. It is a world center—a city of superlatives, contrasts and paradoxes.

Its population of slightly more than 2,000,000 makes it, by a wide margin, the metropolis of South America and the southern hemisphere. It is the greatest of Spanish-speaking cities, having nearly three times as many inhabitants as Madrid. It is greater than any other Latin city except Paris. In the New world it shares third place with Philadelphia; only New York and Chicago surpass it. And now that Petrograd and Moscow have shrunk while Vienna is marking time, it probably ranks or soon will rank as the eighth city of the world, led only by the three metropolises of Europe (London, Berlin and Paris), the two of North America (New York and Chicago), and Tokyo and Osaka in Asia.

This great city is the focus of the culture, thought, politics, economics, and social life of Argentina as well as the funnel through which pour the millions of pounds of dressed meats and the millions of bushels of wheat which make up the contribution of the republic to the hungry peoples of the Old world. Its language is the language of Spain, but many other things Spanish have been thrust aside. Its inhabitants would laugh at the idea of a midday siesta—so generally observed in most Spanish-American countries. The rapid development of Argentina has made innumerable fortunes, and the stream of gold has been poured lavishly into the lap of Buenos Aires. In no other city, perhaps, can one see so strikingly displayed the evidences of extreme opulence.

Making a Marvelous City.

In progress and the possession of vision the people of Buenos Aires are unsurpassed even by the restless builders of North America's greatest cities. For centuries after its establishment Buenos Aires was without a port. Ships anchored miles from the shallow, sandy shore and all freight was handled in lighters. Within the last twenty-five years the municipality has constructed the largest artificial docks in the world. These provide adequate facilities for the thousands of ocean vessels and coasting craft that put into its port annually.

The narrow checker-board of streets in the business center which the colonial Buenos Aires bequeathed to the world-city of today has been a constant embarrassment in the face of the demands of modern business. The municipality has widened some of these narrow ways at a cost of many millions of dollars, into stately and handsome avenues, and is carving other arteries of traffic diagonally through the closely packed squares.

In the newer parts of the city streets of ample width and numerous broad avenues have been laid out. Many of the avenues are lined with the costly palaces of Argentina's multimillionaires. It is in this part of the city and in such semi-business avenues as the tree-trimmed Avenida de Mayo with its mile or more of fine hotels, clubs, cafes, and business buildings de luxe, that Buenos Aires reminds the traveler of Paris. The comparison is forced on the observer again when he drives in the afternoon through Palermo park, the Bois de Boulogne of Buenos Aires, and becomes a part of the seemingly interminable procession of smart equipages bearing their throng of well-dressed men and women.

The men of Buenos Aires are up-to-date in all things; but its women are even ahead of the times. They wear the latest Paris creations even before they are donned by the Parisiennes themselves. Climate must be given its rightful place in the explanation of this paradox. Summer models are designed in Paris in December, and the reversal of the seasons south of the Equator makes these seemingly premature creations fitting attire in Buenos Aires in January and February when they reach the best monde of that distant metropolis. Buenos Aires is in the south latitude corresponding to that of Charleston, S. C., north of the Equator, and has a climate somewhat like that of the country between Charleston and Norfolk, though drier.

Montevideo, on the northern shore of the estuary, presents in its tempo something of a contrast to Buenos Aires. Physically, it is situated so that it is one of the healthiest cities in the world, and it has an equable climate which makes it a delightful place to live in. In addition it possesses an atmosphere free from the bustle and noise of the more modern and commercial Buenos Aires and the more metropolitan Rio. Because of these features, Montevideo has become the resort city of South America's Atlantic coast. Thousands of wealthy South Americans are to be found there at nearly all seasons of the year, participating in the carnivals, gambling in the great government-owned casinos that may be compared to those of Monte Carlo, or merely enjoying the restful life of this city which still clings to the Spanish habit of looking to "manana." Since Montevideo is in the southern hemisphere its seasons are the reverse of those in the United States. Visitors are especially numerous for the bathing season which begins in October, corresponding to the northern May, and is at its height at Christmas, the southern midsummer.

Detached impressions of Montevideo will bring to mind many similes and contrasts with better known cities. Like New York it covers a narrow strip of land from shore to shore, in this case a peninsula. But in architecture it is the antithesis of the North American metropolis, being made up of a seemingly vast number of low stone buildings, a few two or three stories in height, the great majority of them but one story. The principal thoroughfare, "The Avenue of the Eighteenth of July," extending along the ridge of the peninsula, with its colonnades and sidewalk cafes, gives a touch of Paris. And as a great packing center for the live stock produced on the unsurpassed pastures of Uruguay, Montevideo is comparable to Chicago or Kansas City. Evidence of this fact is sometimes wafted on the winds when they blow to the city from the seat of the gigantic industry across the bay.

Clings to Old Customs.

In physical equipment Montevideo is modern. It is well lighted, well watered, adequately supplied with transportation facilities, and most admirably drained. Socially it clings to the past, following more faithfully than any other large city outside of Spain and the Orient the old Spanish-Moorish traditions of society's proper attitude toward women.

Courting is still carried on by smitten swains parading below the balconies of their senoritas and whispering sweet nothings to them—from a safe distance. Ladies go freely on the streets but not in the company of men. "Society is mainly a matter of family parties. Even at the opera there are separate galleries for men and women, and unless a Montevidian family man can afford the price of orchestra seats he must view the production from one level while his wife looks on from another.

A cloistered life can hardly be said to have affected the appearance of the women adversely. Throughout South America Montevideo has the reputation formerly possessed by Budapest of harboring the most beautiful women of its continent.

Montevideo has nearly a score of daily newspapers, and the voices of a small army of newsboys are heard constantly except during an hour and a half at midday when a "siesta" is enforced by law for all business. With the voices of the newsboys mingle those of youths and derelict adults hawking government lottery tickets or boxes of matches from the sale of which the government also obtains revenue.

Just as Uruguay is free from physical extremes—it is without mountains or gorges, deserts or jungles—so Montevideo is without social extremes. It has no squalid slums and no ostentatious "millionaires' row." It may not inaptly be dubbed a comfortable bourgeois paradise.

Montevideo is famed for its port which is one of the best on the Atlantic coast of the Americas. The city has a population of approximately 450,000, more than a quarter of the population of the entire 72,000 square miles of the republic.

Mathematics

Johnny's mother had been teaching him to count money and to be careful in spending it. One day he came home from an errand to the grocery with five pennies in change.

"Now, Johnny," said mother, "I will give you these pennies if you can tell me how much they make."

"Five all-day suckers," said Johnny.

fore the British columns under Cornwallis and Knyphausen when General Green, in command of the main Revolutionary forces, ordered General Pulaski—so relates Pulaski's comrade-at-arms, Captain Rogowski—and other contemporary officers, to advance against the enemy—"We covered four miles in forty minutes. Galloping in a cloud of dust we met General Sullivan's army in a disorganized retreat.....Knyphausen's column was getting the upper hand over General Maxwell (American). And then came General Pulaski, in his Polish uniform of the Bar Confederation, shouting the command 'forward' in a voice which penetrated our spines.

"Whither are we going", I asked myself and then the thunder of sixteen hundred hoofs crashed upon the British columns. Pulaski was mad with the lust of fight, slashing right and left, his sword dripping with blood. We were crowded, we were surrounded, and then the cry "Help is coming" and the British began to retreat. Now Pulaski raised himself in his stirrups and shouted "Forward Again". And we went forward, trampling down platoon after platoon of the British columns until their retreat became a rout."...."I have been in many battles, the memory of some raises my hair on end, but such bloody fight I have never seen."

Thus writes General Pulaski's compatriot and comrade and now let us have the record from General Washington himself, upon whose recommendation, after the battle of Brandywine, the Continental Congress commissioned Pulaski a Brigadier General and assigned him to the command of the American Cavalry. Hence his well deserved title of the "Father of American Cavalry."

In his letter of recommendation to the Continental Congress, Washington said: "This gentleman has been, like us, engaged in defending the liberty and independence of his country, and has sacrificed his fortune to his zeal for these objects. He derives from hence a little to our respect that ought to operate in his favor as far as the good of the service will permit."

Later on General Pulaski saved the Continental Army from a surprise at Warren Tavern and took part in the battle of Germantown, and in the winter of 1777-8 participated in the operations of General Wayne and helped defeat a division of British troops at Haddonfield, N. J. Congress now authorized General Pulaski to form a corps of Lancers and Light Infantry which became famous as the "Pulaski Legion" with its own standard. At the head of this legion he successfully defended Charleston in May, 1779.

On October 9th, 1779, at the battle of Savannah, General Pulaski led his cavalry in an attack upon the British in order to save the French columns under General D'Estaign, when he was struck by a fragment of a shell and dehorsed. Unmindful of his mortal wound he shouted his commands at the charging cavalry. First aid was given to him on the battlefield by Dr. Lynch, the great grand uncle of Dr. J. Lynch, now living in Detroit, Michigan, who had the shell fragment extracted from General Pulaski's right hip, in his possession until May of this year, when he presented it to the Georgia Historical Society at Savannah.

WHERE NEW YORK GETS ITS APPLES

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 11.—In 1925 New York city received 12,923 carloads of apples, of which the fruit growers of the state supplied 3,682 carloads. The Shenandoah-Cumberland region of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia supplied 2,400 carloads; western states furnished 5,047 carloads, mostly in boxes, and therefore a larger supply than the carload figures indicate, since boxed apples run about 750 bushels to the car as compared to 525 bushels in barrels or bushel baskets. New England supplied the city with 509 carloads; and approximately 850 additional carloads came in by trucks, mainly from New York and New Jersey.

Counting those cities which received one carload or more, New York farmers sent 4,789 carloads to cities in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania; 360 carloads to New England; 146 to the south, and 2,258 carloads to the west, but very few of these went to points west of Chicago.

The western states furnished, in all, 20,927 carloads; the Shenandoah-Cumberland region 8,569; New York 7,527, and New England 708 carloads.

The foregoing figures are derived from a report recently issued by the United States department of agriculture, and the comparisons have been made by Leland Spencer of the New York state college of agriculture at Cornell University, who points out further that the smaller cities of New York, and those near important fruit-raising centers, as Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, undoubtedly received a large part of their total supply of apples by truck.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

New York—An all white wedding at which the bride and her attendants dispense with rouge is society's latest. Absence of facial coloring is said to the effect of gowns when Alexandria Daiuisi was married to Alexander Davenport Kinloch, heir to a Scottish baronetcy, in fashionable St. Thomas's.

Philadelphia—Mrs. Anna Boyer found in a secret drawer of her grandmother's desk a diary describing the honeymoon trip of her grandparents to Niagara Falls in 1829. It took them 10 days to reach the place. On the 100th anniversary of the trip Mrs. Boyer flew to the Falls and back in eight hours.

New York—Another talented singer has deserted the Broadway stage for Hollywood. Doris Eaton, nimble dancer, has gone to join Mary, Pearl and Evelyn.

New York—Betty Randolph, hairdresser, sportswoman, thrice a divorcee and formerly an actress, must be operated on as a result of a fall from her horse while hunting woodchucks. She insisted on remounting and continuing the hunt.

Constantinople—The prime minister has learned to swim. Underneath big headlines a newspaper thus recorded his progress:

"Our honored leader, Ismet Pasha, swam several yards in the Marmora devoid of the lifebelt which he has habitually been wearing during these exercises."

Forest Hills, N. Y.—Johnny Doeg is a talking tennis player. He talks especially to himself, such as "Ouch, rotten", or "Oh, murder", when he makes a bad shot. Sometimes he tells himself after sundry outbursts: "Shut up, Doeg."

New York—Doris George Hale, who used to delight audiences of "Allez-oop" with her dancing as one of the George sisters, is the mother of triplets, two girls and a boy. She was married to Paul A. Hale a year ago.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT P.-T. MEETING OF SCHOOL NO. 6

(Official Report)

There was a large attendance at the Parent-Teacher meeting of School No. 6 Tuesday. Two new teachers and several new members were welcomed by Mrs. Emerick the president.

Mr. Miner commented on the good condition of the school building and the new equipment installed during the summer. He also mentioned that there were 550 children registered.

Those paying their annual dues received a new type of membership card put out by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and common to all the states. It gives the objects of the congress, the permanent platform and what it means to be a parent-teacher worker.

It was voted to give a prize of $5 in 8A to the one having the highest average in all regents' subjects.

Miss Blakeslee's talk was well worth hearing. She thanked us for our past cooperation and asked for the same during the coming year. The mothers were told something about the physical examination and urged to be present to see their own children examined. If any physical defect should be found she asked that they receive our attention. Especially did she mention teeth, emphasizing the fact that "first teeth" well taken care of, pave the way for a good set of permanent teeth. When a child is sent home with suspicious symptoms he should be isolated from all other children until his condition is definitely determined.

The milk for undernourished children, hot lunches in winter, eye glasses and clothing were some of the things she mentioned in closing, asking for our help along these lines when needed.

Miss Blakeslee was given a rising vote of thanks for her interesting and instructive talk after which the meeting adjourned.

TELEPHONE COMPANY OPENS NEW OFFICES.

New telephone business offices for the convenience of telephone customers in High Falls, Phoenicia, Rosendale, Shokan and Woodstock have been opened in these places, according to an announcement made today by A. H. Nelson, manager of the New York Telephone Company at Kingston, the present home office for these customers. The new offices are located in the operating quarters of the company and will be under the supervision of the Kingston office.

Managers for these new offices have been appointed and are prepared to receive payments and accept applications for service. Mrs. M. Hicks is in charge at High Falls, Mrs. H. Wrabel at Phoenicia, Miss A. C. McNamara at Rosendale, Mrs. O. Cudney at Shokan and Mrs. J. Jones at Woodstock. Where business is carried on by mail all mail should be addressed to the Kingston office as in the past.

"The growth of the telephone business here and the steadily increasing number of customers has warranted the opening of these new offices," Mr. Nelson said. "They have been opened for the subscribers' convenience in carrying on business transactions with the company."

Popular Young Ashokan Girl Gains New Health Through Use Of Nu-Erb

Famous Medicine Is Highly Endorsed For Producing Splendid Results In Disorders Of Stomach And Liver.

Kingston men and women daily continue to call on the Nu-Erb man at McBride Drug Store, telling of the splendid results that are to be obtained through using this modern herbal medicine and during the year that Nu-Erb has been known in Kingston, thousands of men and women in this vicinity, have given signed statements, publicly endorsing it. For example, here is the recent story that was told by Miss Lulu Gollman, Box 333, Ashokan, N. Y.

"Nu-Erb has helped me in so many ways, that I do not hesitate to recommend it," said Miss Gollman. "Before taking this medicine I suffered continually from weakened kidneys, a sluggish liver and a disordered stomach. I was subject to severe dizzy spells, floating spots before my eyes and my nerves were so on edge, that I couldn't even sleep at night.

"I had used other medicines, but it remained for Nu-Erb to actually help these troubles and since using this medicine for a few weeks, my entire health has improved and the distressing troubles of my stomach, kidney and liver have all been relieved. I can highly endorse this medicine to anyone."

Nu-Erb is the ideal system tonic and regulator. It correts digestive disorders, strengthens weak kidneys, quiets the nerves, rouses a lazy liver to full action, relieves constipation and puts a stop to headaches, dizziness, biliousness, rheumatism and neuritis.

MISS LULU GOLLMAN.

McBride Drug Store, 312 Wall St., is headquarters in Kingston for Dr. French's Nu-Erb. Go see the Nu-Erb man now making his headquarters there and let him explain to you the merits of this remarkable medicine.

SCOTLAND YARD TO KEEP SLEUTH

Unlikely That Wensley, Great Detective, Will Come to United States.

London.—Law-abiding citizens of Chicago who were elated over the prospect that Chief Constable Frederick Wensley, who has recently resigned from Scotland Yard, would be added to the Chicago police force, seem doomed to disappointment.

It has not been made public who originated the plan to bring the famous British detective to America, but it is believed that the idea was sponsored by certain groups who think that some drastic efforts should be made to clean out the heavily entrenched crime syndicate in Chicago if the city expects to attract many visitors to its fair in 1933.

It was reported here recently that Constable Wensley had been offered a very large salary to go to Chicago, but the identity of the person or group making the offer was carefully concealed. As soon as his retirement from Scotland Yard was announced and the Chicago bid made public, Paris also made him a flattering offer to take charge of its police force. Constable Wensley has not yet announced his future plans. He is now sixty-four years old, which is the age limit for chief constables, although a special five-year extension was offered him by Scotland Yard because of his remarkable record. There are indications that he may accept this tender.

Would Face Hard Task.

It is admitted that he would confront one of the hardest tasks of his long career if he accepted the Chicago offer. He would encounter dirty politics, some indifferent judges, professional juries, many corrupt co-workers, and the world's boldest criminals, and his best efforts might go for naught.

It will be a great day for British and international crooks when Constable Wensley or "Fred," as the underworld usually calls him, retires to private life, for during his 42 years of service on the London police force he has become the terror of the underworld; for many years he has been head of the criminal investigation department, of the C. I. D., devoting all his time to detective work.

He is not in the least spectacular in his methods; he is quiet and slow of speech but remarkably alert of mind and has solved some of his most difficult cases from an arm chair in Scotland Yard.

Constable Wensley joined the London police force in 1887. The following year occurred the famous "Jack-the-Ripper" murders, which horrified the world and kept London, especially the Whitechapel section, in a torment of fear for months. There were seven "ripper" victims, and the murders, all alike in the maniacal fury with which the criminal carved and mutilated, occurred over a period of five months.

Caught Anarchists.

The identity of "Jack" was never disclosed, although Sir Melville L. MacNaghten, former chief of the C. I. D., said, after his retirement, that the Ripper committed suicide on November 10, the day following the last of his atrocious crimes, and that Scotland Yard knew who he was, where and how he died. It was assumed by the public that he was a man of education and position who succumbed to the impulses of a criminal streak and committed suicide when the police were about to close in on him.

While divisional detective inspector in charge of the Whitechapel area, in 1910, Wensley discovered the whereabouts of the famous gang of anarchists led by "Peter the Painter," who had killed a police sergeant and wounded four of his fellows. Wensley rounded up the suspects in a house in Stepney, and the famous "siege of Sidney street," a battle that lasted seven hours, took place before the suspects were captured.

Scots guards, police and a battery of artillery were engaged under the direction of that doughty warrior, Winston Churchill. During the spectacular battle a policeman was wounded in the street. Wensley dashed from his shelter when he saw the man fall to the pavement, and amid a hail of bullets from the intrenched anarchists in the building he carried the injured man to safety. For this feat he received the king's medal.

Solved Thompson Murder.

The following year another gruesome murder occurred in London. Leon Beron, an elderly Frenchman, was found in Clapham common; he had been stabbed 19 times, and on each cheek a letter "S" had been carved. Quietly and patiently Wensley pieced together tiny bits of evidence that linked the murder with the Houndsditch murders which had led up to the "battle of Sydney street."

Leon Beron had given information that had led the police to the hideout of the gang in Sidney street. Stinie Morrison was the man Wensley wanted for Beron's murder, and it was not long until he walked into a restaurant which Morrison frequented, called the murderer outside, and strolled with him to the nearest police station, without handcuffs, as though this were the most casual arrest and not the capture of an international crook.

One of the most famous murder cases in which Wensley figured as chief detective was the Edith Thompson-Frederick Bywaters case in 1922 which was an English version of the Snyder-Gray case in America five years later.

Like Ruth Snyder, Edith Thompson was fond of gaiety and dancing, while her husband, a shipping clerk, found his greatest pleasure in boating, fishing and swimming; like the Snyders, the Thompsons lived in a middle-class suburb near the great city, and Edith found relaxation from the humdrum of domestic life with her uninteresting husband by flitting to the city to meet a lover—Bywaters—as often as possible. And each time she met him, for months prior to the murder, she and her paramour had discussed getting rid of her unwanted husband. Again and again she tried to poison him but each time she failed, as many notes to Bywaters, later found in his room, indicated.

Method His Own.

Finally the wife decided upon immediate and drastic action. She invited her lover to dinner, for he was friendly with the husband, and afterward suggested that they all go to see a motion picture. On the pretext of going by a shorter route the lovers led the doomed husband down a dark and narrow side street and there he was stabbed, the wife immediately afterward screaming for help, while the lover disappeared.

Here again was a case that at first seemed to offer no clews. But Wensley was a master at getting the information he wanted by a few adroit questions. Sir Richard Muir, who was for many years chief crown prosecutor, and who naturally came into frequent close contact with Wensley's work, once said to him: "His methods are his own, and many a criminal who made the mistake of underestimating him learned too late how clever he really was. By a few well-chosen questions he has the rare gift of laying bare a man's innermost thoughts."

A few questions put to the guilty Edith Thompson resulted in her telling the whole story, which brought her and her lover to the gallows. Unlike the Snyder-Gray pair, however, their love did not cool after their arrest, and they sent loving messages to each other constantly until the end.

Murder Protests Too Much.

Another murderer whose crime was uncovered by Wensley's detective methods was Norman Thorne, who murdered his sweetheart, Elsie Cameron, at his poultry farm at Crowborough, in December, 1925. Following the girl's disappearance, Thorne wrote anxious letters to her parents asking where she was, and even inserted personal messages to her in the newspapers, begging her to communicate with him, saying that no matter what had happened he forgave all, and ending: "You must realize, dear, the almost intolerable agony your silence is causing not only to your parents, but to me."

Wensley concluded that the lover was protesting too much and sent men to search Thorne's little farm. The girl's body and suitcase were found buried behind his chicken house and Thorne was hanged for his crime.

One of Wensley's most recent and remarkable pieces of work was that of directing the inquiry into the murder of Police Constable Gutteridge, who was shot and killed one night on a lonely road in Essex by two motor bandits. There were apparently no clews to work on, and the C. I. D. for weeks, under Wensley's direction, combed the underworld of London for any slight shreds of evidence on which they could begin to build up a case. Finally their efforts were rewarded and the two guilty men captured, convicted and hanged.

Raises Roosters Have Legal Right to Crow

Glens Falls, N. Y.—Roosters of this vicinity may crow as long, loudly and early as they please, according to a decision of J. Ward Russell, city attorney, who was called upon to settle the matter. Numerous residents had complained that the birds continually disturbed their slumbers.

The mayor stated he had never heard of an ordinance for quieting roosters and Russell decided there was nothing to be done about the fowls outside of using them for Sunday dinners or following the ancient maxim of "early to bed and early to rise."

received threats against his life and had a number of narrow escapes from the attempted vengeance of criminal enemies, but he has gone imperturbably on his way making Scotland Yard famous for always getting its man.

Cost of Illness Set at 4 Billions Yearly

Washington.—Cost of illness to the American public is computed by Dr Homer Folks, a prominent social worker, at the tremendous annual total of $3,729,925,306, or almost the same amount it cost to operate the United States government in the last fiscal year. This total is divided as follows: Physicians, $745,000,000; quacks, $120,000,000; dispensaries, $2,233,824; hospitals, $404,501,572; nursing, $151,000,000; medical supplies, $700,000,000; dental, $285,000,000; loss of wages, $1,245,000,000; prevention of illness, $72,290,000. In addition, Doctor Folks estimates loss of wages due to premature death caused by illness at $15,000,000,000 annually.

Salvation Army Titles

It is to Elijah Cadman, a humble chimney-sweep of Coventry, to whom the credit for the military ranks and titles of the Salvation army must really go, writes a contributor in London Tit-Bits. Once known as "King of the Roughs," Cadman was converted and became an ardent Salvationist. He was given charge of a mission and began to call himself a "captain in God's army to fight the devil." To mark William Booth as his superior officer, Cadman called him "general." And because William Booth knew well the value of a dramatic appeal to the popular mind, the titles, after some hesitation due to modesty on William Booth's own part, were accepted.

WHALES HEREAFTER TO BE ELECTROCUTED

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP).—Modern science has been extended to the whaling industry with an invention to kill the huge mammals by electricity.

A report received from its representatives in Norway by the Department of Commerce said that a new electrical method for killing whales has been perfected by Norwegian engineers.

One of the advantages of the new method, it was reported, will be that the dead whale remains floating, in contrast to the present method of killing, which causes it to sink.

HERE'S SOMETHING NEW

A CHRYSLER DEVELOPMENT THAT REVOLUTIONIZES PERFORMANCE

Copyright 1929 Chrysler Corporation

SOMETHING startling has happened. Three sensational new Chryslers are abroad in the land.

In the thick of city traffic—on the streets and boulevards—along the highways and byways—in the mountains—on the plains—their unprecedented performance is changing every notion of what a motor car can be expected to do.

The new Chryslers introduce such epochal new developments as:

MULTI-RANGE GEAR SHIFT
DOWN-DRAFT CARBURETION
SYNCHRONIZED POWER
PARAFLEX SPRINGS
ARCHITONIC BODIES

—and a host of other features that put them farther ahead of all other present-day automobiles than the first Chrysler was ahead of the cars of five years ago.

Come to the salesroom. Examine these new Chryslers at your leisure. Then take one out; drive it; and you'll experience the supreme sensation of outclassing other cars on any road, in any test, and under all conditions.

THE GREAT BIG MAN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE TALK about the great big things:
The great big pile of gold,
The great big men, financial kings,
The great big jobs they hold.
Well, son, I've seen some great big men,
But, when I came to call,
The big men weren't talking then
The great big things at all.

The man who had the great big mill
That had the great big trade,
I found, my boy, was making still
The little things he made;
And men who made the big machines
To stand the great big test
Were spending time and spending means
To make each part the best.

The man who looks for great big things,
Just great big things to do,
To no endeavor ever brings
The thing that puts it through.
The man who nothing leaves to guess,
Who every part will scan,
Will make the great, the big success.
For he's a great big man.

Mother's Cook Book

Being a parent used to be one of the most simple, natural and inevitable developments in the world. But nowadays, one has no business to be married, unless, sleeping and waking, one is conscious of the responsibility.—Abraham Flexner.

THE SCHOOL LUNCH BOX

FOR many weeks in the year some mothers find the lunch box for the children is an added burden to the morning duties. Milk and sandwiches are the usual wholesome contents of the child's lunch box. But sandwiches may become very monotonous, if the fillings and breads are not varied.

Dried fruits offer a change from routine fillings and they combine well with peanut butter, cream cheese and cottage cheese and the sandwiches keep fresh and moist longer than those with drier fillings.

The special sandwich loaf is a convenience, as all the slices are the same size. In using the home made loaf, care must be taken to put together adjacent slices or they will not fit. All bread should be at least twenty-four hours old to cut easily. Many like to spread the butter on the loaf, then cut. Whole wheat bread, graham, bran and steamed brown breads combine well with dates, raisins and figs in the filling.

Have a bowl of softened butter, that is, butter which has been allowed to stand in a warm room to soften, or which has been creamed. If the rounding loaf of home made bread is used, spread the loaf with the butter, and the next slice with the filling. It is far better to leave the crusts on bread given children as they need both the browned crusty edges because of their wholesomeness and it promotes the chewing habit which is so vital to healthy teeth and gums as well as good digestion. The following are a few fillings using the date which will be found most agreeable to the children:

Date and Cheese Sandwiches.

Take one-pound loaf of bread which will cut into twenty-four slices. Use one cream cheese or half cupful of cottage cheese. To the cream cheese add one to two tablespoonfuls of cream. Cut twenty-four dates into quarters lengthwise, spread one slice of bread with softened butter and the next with cheese. Into the cheese press four of the quarters of dates, cover with the buttered slice.

Cream cheese with candied or maraschino cherries in the same amount as the dates, makes a very tasty sandwich.

News of the Day In Wall Street

New York, Sept. 11.—New building and engineering work contracted for in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains from September 2 to September 6 totaled $78,561,100, F. W. Dodge Corporation reports. The figures were about 14 per cent lower than those for the corresponding week last year.

The American Equities announced today that more than 95 per cent of the stock of the San Jose Water Works had been deposited under contract purchase and that arrangements were being made for the acquisition of the property by the General Water Works and Electric Corporation.

Stockholders of the Atlas Plywood Company will vote on September 18 on a proposal to increase the authorized capital from 100,000 shares to 200,000 shares and the payment of a 100 per cent stock dividend.

Department store sales increased 5 per cent last month over the figures for the corresponding month last year, according to reports of 446 stores to the Federal Reserve System.

Stockholders of the Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation have been offered the right to purchase additional stock at $80 a share up to 8 per cent of their holdings, or one additional share for each 12½ shares held. The rights will expire October 21. The stock closed yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange at 133¾ a share.

The Paragon Refining Company, owned by Cincinnati interests, has purchased control of the Valvoline Oil Company. E. W. Edwards, president of Paragon, was elected president of Valvoline and W. Dixon Ellis, former president of the latter concern, was made chairman of the board. The Paragon directorate was added to the Valvoline Company board.

Terms of the purchase were not announced, but it was reported that between 25,000 and 30,000 Valvoline shares were acquired by Paragon for about $200 each.

Stock of Bankrupt Brings $3,000.

At a meeting of the creditors of Anna Hyman, Saugerties, at the office of Amos Van Etten, referee in bankruptcy, held Tuesday afternoon, the stock of the bankrupt estate, consisting of children's and ladies' wearables, was sold to J. Cohen of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. There was spirited bidding by dealers from New York, Rochester, Philadelphia and Saugerties. I. Brown of the latter place raising the bidding until the stock was finally sold for about $3,000. Frank A. McCollom of New York represented the Irving Trust Company, the trustee, with his attorney, Charles G. Coffin, a former district attorney of Greene county. The bankrupt was represented by Grant M. Brinnier of Saugerties.

AT BUFFALO

In purchasing a car from income the average allowance on a good used car usually more than covers the initial Pierce-Arrow payment

THE mode of the hour is of course consulted in the selection of new colorings by Pierce-Arrow. But there is an artistry employed in the process which is rare among automobiles.

The blending of certain shades and tones... the choice of fine fabrics to match... the development of combinations which exclude the commonplace ... the harmonizing of interiors with exteriors. All are the concern of artists who are masters of decoration and guardians, as well, of the tradition that is Pierce-Arrow.

The result is a quality that sets this distinguished line apart. Also there is a definite limit to the number of Pierce-Arrows possible of creation each season—governed by certain fine processes of manufacture. And so today's exhibit of the new Pierce-Arrow colorings is one to be attended without delay.

John Straub Gets 30 Days

John Straub of 25 Post street, a baker by trade, was sentenced to thirty days in the Ulster county jail this morning by Judge Shufeldt. The defendant pleaded guilty to the charge of assault in the third degree, the complainant being his wife.

PORT EWEN MAN SERIOUSLY INJURED BY BUS.

At 1:20 o'clock Tuesday afternoon a New York-Hunter bus in charge of Chester Coutant of 119 Downs street struck Chester DeGraff, 74 years old, of Port Ewen while DeGraff was walking on the road near the Port Ewen Cemetery. The bus is the property of the Frank Martz Coach Company of 500 West 56th street, New York city.

According to the report of the accident filed by the bus driver he was proceeding north along the road when Mr. DeGraff walked from behind a parked car and in front of the bus. Before the bus could be stopped the left front fender struck the aged man, knocking him down. He sustained a cut over the right eye, his right arm was broken and he was otherwise injured.

Dr. G. W. Ross was called and the injured man was conveyed to the Kingston Hospital by Coutant.

INVESTIGATING OUTRAGES ON COMMUNIST LEADERS

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 11(AP).—Investigation of the kidnaping and flogging of communist union organizers was being conducted today by state authorities under direction of Governor O. Max Gardner, and labor leaders planned to carry through their program in North Carolina's textile centers despite purported threats against their lives.

Bill Dunne, secretary of the communist party in the United States, asserted last night that international labor defence officials would conduct the previously announced mass meeting in South Gastonia Saturday.

CONSPIRACY AGAINST GERMAN REPUBLIC.

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP).—A dangerous conspiracy of terror against the German republic, organized by Nationalist fanatics who are members of the notorious "Consul" organization founded by ex-Naval Captain Ehrhardt, is believed to have been unearthed by the police, who have arrested twenty men implicated in recent bomb outrages in various parts of Germany, including the attempt against the Reichstag buildings.

Wurts Street Baptist Church.

The members of the Wurts Street Baptist Church and congregation will please take notice that the church prayer meetings will be resumed in the chapel at 7:45 p. m. Thursday of this week. The pastor hopes for a hearty response to this announcement. Services both morning and evening next Lord's Day in the chapel. Bible school at 11:45 a. m.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Bullish enthusiasm was at fever pitch again in today's stock market. Lowering of the call money rate from 9 to 8 per cent, coupled with the announcement of the formation of several new large investment trusts, which Wall Street regarded as an expression of confidence by the bankers in the general outlook, formed the background for the advance, which ran from 1 to 8 points in most of the active issues, and from 10 to 20 points in a sprinkling of high-priced specialties.

Pool operators resumed buying on a large scale on the theory that the recent reaction had sufficiently corrected the market's top-heavy speculative position. More activity also was apparent on the part of small traders, much of the buying from this source coming from the middle and far west. A few soft spots cropped out here and there, but except for a few minutes at the opening there was little evidence of any concerted selling pressure.

Weekly steel trade reviews stressed the revival of railroad buying, but explained that consumers were in no apparent rush to place fourth-quarter contracts. Two of the leading building statistics organizations have reported a falling off in new construction. Oil output continues in excessive volume.

Common stock of the Standard Brands Company, the new food products combine recently organized by the J. P. Morgan interests, was placed on an annual dividend basis of $1.50: Air Reduction directors declared an extra dividend of $1.50, and Union Carbide stockholders were offered the right to subscribe to new stock at $80 a share on the basis of one new share for each 12½ held.

One of the interesting developments of the day was the heavy buying of Standard Oil of New Jersey, which was marked up 3½ points to a new high at 78 on buying believed to be for the account of investment trusts. General Asphalt tallied 3 points in sympathy, with gains in the other oils of more moderate proportions.

Stocks which have a so-called "scarcity value" were marked up in rather impressive fashion. American Machine and Foundry, J. I. Case, Commercial Solvents, Johns Manville and Anchor Cap common and preferred were whirled up 10 to 20 points, several of them to new high prices.

Quotations given by Parker McElroy & Co., members N. Y. Stock Exchange, 120 Broadway, New York city, branch office, Stuyvesant Hotel.

Jacob Siller Case Postponed

Jacob Siller of 22 East Union street was placed under arrest Tuesday evening on a charge of cruelty to animals. He gave $50 bail for his appearance in court today. At the hearing before City Judge Shufeldt the case was postponed until September 17.

The police were notified by neighbors in the vicinity of 37 Ann street that they were being annoyed by cattle in the cow shed at that place. Inspector Cook was also notified and accompanied the police to the shed, where they allege they discovered six cows with ropes tied through their snouts. The ropes were placed in evidence this morning. A number of residents in the neighborhood were in court to testify as witnesses.

Y.M.C.A. Staff Workers Named

Clarence S. Schoonmaker, newly appointed general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has announced the appointment of Neil H. Fuller as boys' work secretary and Guy Allen as physical director. The selections were made following several meetings with the board of directors of the local organization and the New York state staff.

Mr. Fuller is a graduate of Colgate University class of 1925. He is 27 years of age. For the past three years he has been Y. M. C. A. secretary fir Cattaraugus county. He taught history and civics in the Angola high school for one year and also was athletic instructor. The new boys' work secretary will take up his duties here on October 1.

Mr. Allen has been in charge of physical work at Olean, N. Y., for the past two years. Before taking up work at Olean he was assistant director at Newark, N. J. He is 29 years of age, married and has two children. He comes to Kingston highly recommended. The new physical director will move to Kingston and take up his duties here October 1.

Italy Makes Good Use of Vast Water Power

One after another the great waterfalls of the Alps and Apennines have been placed in subjugation by Italy, their water guided into huge, high pressure conduits and forced to turn giant turbines, writes Henry Kittredge Norton in World's Work.

Before the World war these turbines were already producing two billion kilowatt hours per year; during the war, because of the shortage of coal and the need for power, this capacity was increased by another billion kilowatts. After the post-war turbulence had settled down into the Fascist regime, a new impetus was given to electrical development, and by the end of 1920 the actual consumption had reached 7,500,000,000 kilowatt hours per annum.

Since then it has continued to mount. More than 7,000 of Italy's 9,000 communes are now supplied with electrical energy. The per capita consumption runs close to 200 kilowatt hours.

As was to be expected under the circumstances, by far the greater portion of Italy's electrical energy is used in turning the wheels of her factories. Lighting is a secondary consideration. Sixty per cent of Italy's electrical energy is used for motor power; 15 per cent for light and heat; 14 per cent in the metallurgical and chemical industries, and the remaining 11 per cent for the electrified railways.

Old Inscription Shows "Horse Age" Beginning

To the learned, century-old Academy of Inscriptions of Paris, Professor Hrozny, of Prague, has communicated his long-expected translation of what is perhaps the most ancient Hittite inscription. It is the first in any language that became European and was cut in the rock of Asia Minor not far from what is now Angora, the new capital of Turkey.

The value of the inscription—what we might call its curiosity—is that it gives the date very nearly when tame horses first appeared so far to the west. It was the beginning of the Horse age in civilization and is of melancholy interest to us who, 4,000 years later, are careering with our automobiles into the Horseless age.

It was supposed that horses were first brought to Egypt, mother of Civilization, about 1,500 years before Christ by the Cassites from Babylon. That was some 500 years after Abraham passed through the Hittite peoples on his way from Ur of the Babylonian Chaldees to the Promised land.—Boston Globe.

Zinc in Industry

Starting with the Nineteenth century the increase in the use of zinc was decidedly accelerated. During the first decade the production was estimated at 0,000 tons. In the fifth decade the output had jumped to 367,000 tons, and for the half century the total was 085,000 tons. The output of the second half century reached the amazing total of 12,100,000 tons, or an increase of 1,300 per cent. The acceleration has continued, and in the year 1927 the output was 1,444,000 tons, a total equal to the production of the first 80 years of the Nineteenth century.

Nearly one-third of the entire world's output of zinc has been produced in the United States.

"Why, what's the matter, Kathryn?" asked her father, "Better eat your potatoes like a good girl; they will help you grow up big and strong."

"That's just it," retorted this modern miss, "I don't ever want to get to be as fat as mother."

Try Negligence Actions in Ulster County Court

Two negligence actions were taken up for trial in county court Wednesday morning. Both actions grow out of a collision at Highland on September 21, 1927, when cars driven by Lloyd Plass and William Dodge came together at the junction of Grand street and the Highland-Kingston road at the Speedway Garage.

According to the testimony Plass and his wife, Florence, were proceeding north in a Rickenbacker car. Dodge was driving west over Grand street at the intersection. Plaintiff Plass claims he was unable to see the Dodge car approaching from his right due to a stone wall and a well which obstructed his vision. When he saw the Dodge car coming from his right he turned to the left of the road to avoid a collision but failed. His car was damaged and Mrs. Plass sustained injuries to her face and several teeth were loosened. Mr. Plass claims $350 damages to his car, $150 for loss of services and doctor's bills and Mrs. Plass asks for $500 damages for the injuries sustained.

At the time of the accident Mr. Dodge was turning from Grand street onto the main road and headed south in the direction from which the Rickenbacker car was coming.

The defendant, Dodge, claims he was approaching the Plass car from its right, had the right of way and that the accident was due to the negligence of Mr. Plass. Mr. Dodge contends that as he approached the intersection he saw the Plass car some 1,000 feet south. A raise in ground permitted a view of the intersection and approaching cars. When he saw the Plass car down the road a long distance he turned into the main highway and the accident followed. At the time the defendant claims he was operating his car in second speed and was using due care.

Peter H. Harp appears for the plaintiff and William F. Leahey for the defendant.

Both cases were tried together by consent of counsel.

No additional cases were ready for trial by a jury and the jurors were excused until Monday at 2 o'clock. No. 14, Jacob Friedman and Sophie Friedman against Joseph W. Greaves, an action for money damages, was added to the day calendar. Nos. 9 and 10, Andrew M. Taylor against Ulster County Ice and Coal Corporation were put over until Monday by consent of counsel.

About the Folks

Miss Miriam Gillette has returned to Valley Stream to resume her teaching, after spending her summer vacation with her parents, Superintendent and Mrs. J. U. Gillette of Port Ewen, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Brendel of Richmond, L. I., are spending two weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Whalen, 94 West O'Reilly street.

Kenneth Van Etten of the Transportation Department of the Canfield Supply Company, who has been enjoying a week's vacation at Plattsburg, has returned.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson R. Smith, Jr., are enjoying a trip to Detroit, expecting to be absent from town for a ten days' vacation. Since their departure from home they have met an old Kingston boy, Roger H. Gibson. While in Detroit Mr. Smith enjoyed the privilege of going through the Chrysler factory.

Mr. and Mrs. William Smith of Chicago have been visiting in St. Remy and Rifton the home of Mr. Smith's father, the Rev. Henry Smith, and grandfather, William Smith, organizer and for many years secretary of the Ulster County Sunday School Association and secretary of the Ulster County Bible Society. The Rev. Henry Smith also held those positions for a number of years, having succeeded his father. Mrs. Smith is the author of many poems that have appeared in the Chicago Daily News and expects to publish soon a book of her collected poems.

THE JOINERS

News of Interest to Members of Fraternal Societies.

The regular meeting of Clinton Chapter, No. 445, O. E. S., will be held at Masonic Hall, Wall street, Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Seven Wonders

There has been considerable discussion recently as to what are the seven wonders of New York city. You may have read that an inquiry resulted in the following popular lists of "wonders": the water supply system, the Woolworth building, the subway, the Metropolitan museum, Brooklyn bridge, the sky line and Grand Central terminal. But in a list that an outside newspaper offers, I find the following:

Ticket speculators, organized bandits, who limit theater audiences to millionaires and traveling men with expense accounts.

Here is a tip for those visitors to New York who may have suffered unnecessarily from the ticket speculator: There are cut-rate agencies in the city where tickets can be bought at half-price for at least 50 per cent of the shows that are running. The half-price rate does not apply to the few outstanding hits, of course, but there are always good shows in the list. If the casual visitor to New York will hunt up a cut-rate agency, he will be surprised at the good entertainment which will be provided at a price that will seem ridiculously low when compared to the box-office schedule.

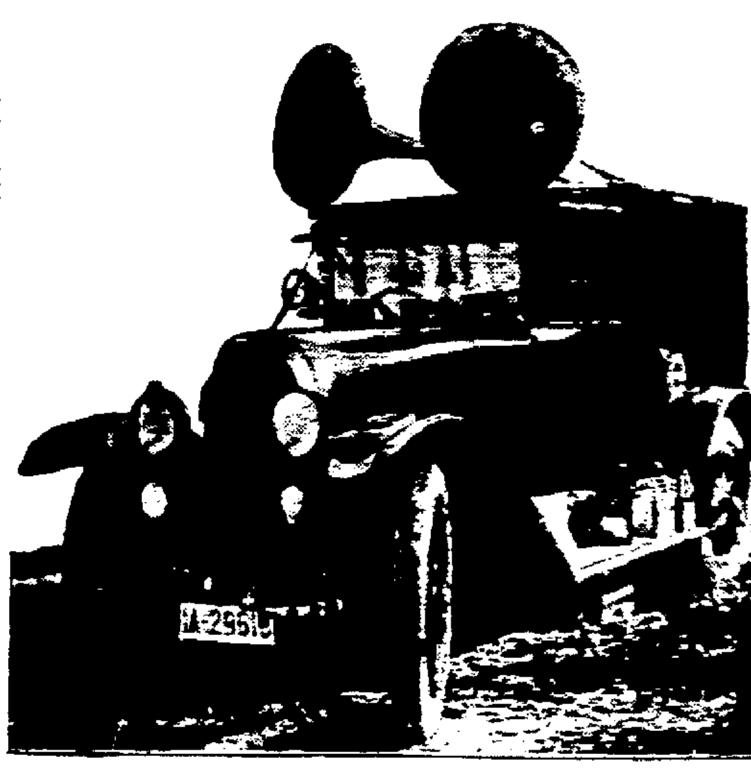
Now, minus his trusty uppers, the disconsolate mess boy sails the seas dreaming of the teeth he left behind him.

LOUD SPEAKERS ARE NEW FAD IN GERMANY



A limousine fitted out with a powerful loudspeaker on Lake Tempun, Germany. It is not uncommon for private car owners to place loudspeakers on their cars in Germany.

OPERATION COST FOR AUTOMOBILE

Average of $293 Was Spent by Each Automobile Owner in 1928.

An average of $293 was spent by each autoist in the United States during 1928 in the operation and maintenance of his car, according to figures compiled by the American Motorists' association, in co-operation with the Automobile Club of Illinois. Of this sum, $101, or 34 per cent, was expended for fuel and lubricants, this being the largest item in the autoist's annual operation and maintenance bill.

Cost $1.14 Per Day.

The $293 figure does not take into account depreciation. The average life of a passenger automobile, according to computation of the federal government, is approximately seven years. During 1928 the average retail price of passenger cars in the United States was $875, which based on a seven-year life expectancy, would mean an average depreciation of $125 per year. From this figure, plus the average upkeep cost of $293, it will be seen that the general average cost of operation, plus depreciation, was $418 per year, or approximately $1.14 per day. The comparable figure for 1927 shows that the average cost of operation, plus depreciation, was $365 for that year, or $1 per day.

The second largest item on the autoist's maintenance bill is for labor incident to repair work, the autoist expending in 1928, for this item, an average of $82. His replacement parts cost him $55, while his average tire bill, during the year, was $34. An average of $21 was expended for accessories, which with the $101 spent for gasoline and oil, make up the total of $293 as the average cost of maintenance for each motor vehicle for 1928.

Comparing Cost.

Comparing the cost of operation in 1928 and 1927 the association's figures show that last year the cost was 28 per cent more than during 1927, when the average operation cost was $229. Comparative figures between the two years, however, it is pointed out by Si. Mayer, president of the Automobile Club of Illinois and vice president of the A. M. A., do not indicate that operation costs are necessarily increasing, the difference being explained primarily by the fact that with better highways available each year the average autoist uses his automobile proportionately more.

Change in Automobile Front Is Now Advised

Because of the high mortality of pedestrians being hit by automobiles, Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner of Suffolk county, Massachusetts, suggests that the front of the present motor car be changed so that it would not mean death to every human being who came into its path. He says the victims of skull fractures who do not die frequently show mental deterioration, sometimes with a complete change in character, and may be converted from intelligent, capable characters into inefficient semi-invalids. Crippling injuries other than those due to skull fractures add to the indictment.

Cooling Fluid Favored for New Motor Vehicle

There is a chance that when the automotive engineer starts thinking seriously of reducing wind resistance in the design of the car, one of his first thoughts will concern the new cooling fluid developed for airplane engines of the water-cooled type.

A tremendous reduction in the size of radiators for this type of plane engine has proved entirely feasible. That such an eventuality might come in motordom is by no means out of the question.

It will mean leaving the anti-freeze in the radiator the year around. Some motorists do it now, through indifference, not wisdom!

THE MOTOR QUIZ

(How Many Can You Answer?)

Q.—What product ranked first in the export of manufactured articles?

Ans.—Automotive products, with a value of $500,174,481.

Q.—What was the amount of the motor vehicle tax collected in 1927?

Ans.—About $808,[illegible].

Q.—What state has the most automobiles in proportion to the population?

Ans.—California, with one car for every two and seven-eighths persons.

Q.—When an engine can be cranked easily by hand, yet the starting motor works sluggishly, what trouble can be looked for?

Ans.—Discharged battery, worn brushes or dirty armature. Examine ignition system.

Preventing Front-Spring Breakage in Light Cars

Frequent breakage of front springs in light cars can be prevented by the provision of a heavy spring leaf, bent to the shape shown and attached to the front axle by means of two U-bolts and a tie plate. A leather pad, placed between the extra spring leaf and the axle, provides a certain amount of resiliency.—G. A. Luers, Washington, D. C., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Extra Spring Leaf, Attached to Front Axle, Supports Front Spring in Light Car.

Practical Suggestions for Curing Sick Auto

When a car lacks its usual snap and get-away, check for the following:

Manifold gasket leaks.

Improper valve clearance.

Leaks past piston rings.

Faulty carburetor adjustment; high or low float level.

Shortage of fuel due to clogged line or screens.

Fouled or improperly gapped spark plugs.

Worn or improperly spaced breaker points.

Early or late ignition timing.

Dragging brakes.

In practically every case loss of power and poor get-away are cured by attention to the above, Frank Nutt, research engineer, says.

ISOLATE DRUGS IN VENOM OF TOADS

Find Potent Substances in Chinese Product.

Baltimore.—The dried venom of Chinese toads has been found to be a virtual pharmacopeia.

Four potent substances have been isolated separately by Dr. K. K. Chen, with the co-operation of Dr. Hans Jensen of Johns Hopkins medical school.

One is ergosterol, which cures rickets in rats in exactly the same manner as cod liver oil does. It occurs together with cholesterol, a white, fatty, crystalline substance which is tasteless and odorless.

Another is adrenalin, identical with that obtained from the suprarenal gland of animals, which has been used widely in medicine. The suprarenal gland, located near the anterior end of each kidney, secretes a substance which has important effects on the circulatory and muscular systems.

The other two principles have an action similar to that of digitalis, which has been employed in the treatment of heart disease. Digitalis is an important drug from the leaves of the purple foxglove.

The venom, processed into dried cakes by Chinese druggists, long has been used in the Orient because of its medicinal properties. Taken internally as a pill it is said to be able to break colds, while externally it has been used in the treatment of toothache and local inflammatory conditions.

Experiments have been conducted with animals but it is hoped, according to Doctor Chen, that further study in man will show the newly isolated substances to be useful therapeutically.

Mystery shrouds the production of the cakes, which are rich with substances identical with animal products on the one hand and resembling plant products on the other, and are at once either a virulent poison or a powerful and beneficial medicine.

Attempts are being made to secure specimens of the toad for a detailed morphological study, to ascertain which species produce the venom. The method of securing the secretions and drying them up into cakes also is the subject of inquiry.

Part of Tree 60,000,000 Years Old Found in U. S.

Trenton, N. J.—Examination of a piece of American chestnut tree found by a well driller at Bradevelt, Monmouth county, several feet below the surface, showed evidence that the chestnut tree grew in New Jersey 60,000,000 years ago, the state department of conservation and development announced recently.

Meredith E. Johnson, assistant state geologist, identified the piece as of the late Cretaceous age, a geologic period which is said to have ended 60,000,000 years ago. Unlike most fossil wood found in these formations, the piece was said to be well preserved and its texture fiber plainly visible. Prof. S. J. Record of the Yale forestry school agreed with Johnson. The piece was placed in the State museum.

The wood was found in the formation known to geologists as Englishtown sand.

House of Seven Gables Turned Into Hostelry

Salem, Mass.—Memories of other days, when colonial gentlewomen and men gathered at the House of Seven Gables in Salem for a few hours of refreshment and entertainment, have been revived by announcement that the historical building has followed the trend of the times and is accommodating overnight guests with board and rooms. "Reasonable prices" are charged for these accommodations, which are in the old Hathaway house, built in 1682, and in the adjoining cottages, which have been renovated for the convenience of out-of-town visitors and others who desire to enjoy a colonial atmosphere.

China to Make Memorial of Beautiful Koo Home

Peiping.—Although Dr. Wellington Koo, former premier of China, is living in exile abroad, his beautiful home in Peiping is to be turned into a memorial to the late Dr. Sun Yat-sen. The action has been taken without consulting Doctor Koo, as it is felt his property can be confiscated as that of a rebel, because he worked for the Chang Tso-lin government.

Cow Removes Tonsils of Boy in Pasture

Berlin, Conn.—Bernard Manurek, four, of Treasure Fields, Kensington, needed to have his tonsils removed, but he or his parents had been putting off the dread day. Now he is rid of the bothersome tonsils, thanks to the unsolicited assistance of a cow.

The boy was attempting to hook a piece of paper on the horn of a grazing cow when the animal lifted its horns and poked him in the mouth. The boy was taken to the office of Dr. A. J. Goodwin, where it was found that the poke had caused the removal of one tonsil and Doctor Goodwin finished the job. The patient is at home, as well as could be expected.

EDISON WINNER IS EAGER TO TRY LUCK AT COLLEGE

When Wilbur Huston won the national contest sponsored by Thomas A. Edison he acquired a scholarship to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which he is eager to attend this fall. Wilbur is shown here with Mr. Edison and in portrait. His father and mother are on the right.

Seattle. (P)—[illegible] and progress by the Edison award, Wilbur B. Huston is eager to begin his college career—and to get away from meeting the public in the role of [illegible].

To discourage the common belief that the national contest was for the express purpose of "filling Thomas A. Edison's shoes," the 17-year-old Seattle boy has told interviewers "it can't be done."

He continued that that is not what he expects to do, nor does he believe it is expected of him. He thinks the award principally is a scholarship in technical training, with the aim of adding greatly to the advance of science.

Hoping he can do what is expected of him, the youth has no fear of making the attempt, no fear of the result. Huston is not boastful, but is [illegible] in his ability [illegible] will get.

[illegible] thoughts of college Wilbur has had a desire to attend the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It was in his first years [illegible] that he upset his [illegible] outlined for [illegible] career, that he might follow in his father's footsteps. His father is the Rt. Rev. Arthur Huston, bishop of the diocese of Olympia.

Although the young man's education will be principally scientific, he has not definitely decided upon the [illegible].

And what he will do when he finishes college is another unsolved question for Huston. He said he is not obligated to work for the Edison company, nor is the Edison company obligated to employ him.

When Huston arrives at Cambridge, Mass., he automatically will become one of a group of nearly [illegible] young men who have set their [illegible] on goals [illegible] in various branches of [illegible]—the student body of M. I. T.

Aside from his purely technical studies young Huston will find many opportunities for cultural development seldom found in an engineering college.

Students are encouraged to participate in campus activities. If he is interested in writing, Huston will find much to interest him in the undergraduate newspaper and humorous and technical publications.

Where Huston will live at the school has not yet been made known. While freshman dormitories are maintained and students are encouraged to make their home there, it is probable Huston may be pledged to one of the fraternities.

Huston's progress doubtless will be interesting to the faculty, because of the unusual type of scholarship he has won, but the treatment accorded him will be the same in every respect as that given the thousands of other students.

Pomona Grange Meets at Milton

(Official Report)

Instead of having all the reports of the various subordinate Granges read by the secretary as heretofore the new plan proposed at a former meeting was tried out for the first time on Friday morning at the regular session of Pomona Grange held in the Grange hall at Milton. Each master and each lecturer was given a mimeograph copy of reports of Grange activities since the June meeting of Pomona and instructed to have them read at a future meeting, thus reaching a larger audience than they would at Pomona.

While a few granges did not send in a report early enough to be included in the printed copy, most of them did so and the result was a most enthusiastic account of worthwhile accomplishments.

The morning session was given over to a discussion of ways and means of making the organization count for more in the county. New committees were appointed as follows:

Committee on Schools—Mrs. David Kiefer, Mrs. Grant Trumper and C. R. Taber.

Committee on Roads—Charles Sahler, Russell Martin and Brother Babcock.

Committee on County Fair—I. C. Barnes, C. Kenneth Taber and J. Wells Weaver.

Resolutions Committee—H. McCormack, Elma K. Young and C. I. Lefever.

Committee on Relations—Albert Hurdt, Nma E. Weaver and Brother Zimgraff.

Traveling Library Committee—J. Wells Weaver, Mrs. Charles Jenkins, and William Thornton.

Miss Evelyn Nance, Home Bureau Manager, spoke of the statewide dramatic contest and urged granges to compete.

She also gave notice of a news-writing school to be held one day only, October [illegible] at the Kingston Court House at [illegible]. Prof. Bristow Adams of Cornell Agricultural School will have charge of this meeting. A number of city editors will make speeches at the luncheon at [illegible] restaurant at one o'clock.

Another announcement made [illegible] of the organization [illegible] to be conducted by State Leader Carl [illegible] Morten September [illegible] at New [illegible], [illegible] 19 at Kingston and [illegible] at Kerhonkson.

Brother Barnes, Pomona Lecturer, announced as the first part of the program, a talk on poultry by Farm Bureau Manager Hurdt. Mr. Hurdt said each year some different problem confronted poultry men. This year it was [illegible] of the flocks in the county were affected. The result of this would be from one to four months loss of production. Different remedies had been tried but the most effective was vaccination, a measure tried out in Vineland, New Jersey with splendid results. Brother Hurdt and a Farm Bureau member went to Vineland and upon investigation determined to do likewise in Ulster county. For a time they had trouble in obtaining live virus as no interstate shipments of this virus were allowed but now Brother Hurdt informed his audience that several places had it on sale. The best time to vaccinate is when the birds are from 12 to 14 weeks old. To date [illegible] have been treated in Ulster County.

Mr. Hurdt also spoke of the fruit exhibit the Farm Bureau put on at the State Fair, 47 varieties of apples, 32 varieties of grapes donated principally by J. Wells Weaver and Milford Hurd, 16 varieties of pears, 14 varieties of plums, 4 varieties of crab-apples, 4 of quinces, 1 of cherries, four of currants and 1 of strawberries making in all 181 varieties of fruit filling the various containers, [illegible] plates, 12 barrels, 16 bushels and 3 boxes. Seneca county got first prize and Ulster second.

Prof. Bruce Bennett of New Paltz Normal school then gave a reading of the play, "The Man Who Died at Midnight," giving his hearers thrills and chills. Prolonged applause marked its finish and Prof. Bennett hurried away without more ado.

The names of the charter members were read from the framed list that will be hung with the picture for which the various granges are competing for the ownership.

Tinned Stuff Used in Navy

More than 10,000,000 pounds of canned goods are consumed by the sailors of the United States navy in a year. Canned tomatoes take the lead in vegetables, followed by peas, corn and stringless beans. Among fruits, peaches lead, followed closely by pineapple, then come prunes, applesauce, apricots, pears, figs and raisins. Figs are relatively new in the canned goods products, but the navy uses them to the extent of 540,000 pounds annually.

Tagging Major League Bases

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

As the Cubs marked time through an open date in the schedule yesterday, the Athletics rushed several strides nearer a pennant already theirs to all intents and purposes. A Philadelphia victory over Cleveland in the first part of a double-header, the permanent removal of the second game from the schedule because of rain and the even break for the Yankees against Detroit all combined to reduce the needs of the Mackmen from nine victories to six.

That unplayed second portion of the Athletic-Indian double bill stands Mr. Mack in just as good stead as a game won. By sweeping their remaining twenty-one games the Yankees could finish with 98 victories and 56 defeats. To better such an improbable performance, the Macks would have to win only six and could lose thirteen. Such a snail's pace would send them under the wire with 98 won and 55 lost.

Of course, if there were any likelihood of a half-game wind-up, the Yanks doubtless would insist that the Indians and the A's play off their postponement, which could be done at Philadelphia on September 22, but no such demand has been made by Edward Grant Barrow as dawn broke over New York this morning. One mere game in this pennant race is about as important as a dime to Mr. Rockefeller, and as the Athletic schedule stands at 153 games the Macks can reach the mathematical certainty by winning six.

George Earnshaw sought his 21st victory in the opener at Philadelphia yesterday, but discovered tough opponents in young Wesley Ferrell and certain Indians. Jimmy Foxx gave the A's a margin of 3 to 2 in the first round by larruping one of Master Ferrell's offerings over the top of the left field seats for his thirty-second homer and his third over the difficult pavilion target this season. The Indians threatened Mr. Earnshaw often, but failed to corner him until the seventh when he was sent reeling from the mound under the weight of three runs.

The Macks themselves rallied in the eighth for a pair to tie and pushed the winner home in the ninth, at precisely the right moment to give Edward Americus Rommel credit for the 6 to 5 victory. Averill and Hodapp hit homers for the Indians.

Babe Ruth celebrated with his forty-third and forty-fourth home runs in New York. The second of these blows, delivered with two Yanks aboard in the ninth round of the nightcap, sent the ex-champions into a tie and paved the way for them to pull out the decision by 10 to 9 a moment later. The Tigers had won the opener by 8 to 4 through the systematic torture of Herb Pennock and Gordon Rhodes in the early rounds.

After Babe delivered his blow against Emil Yde in the nightcap, the Detroit lefthander, fifth in a parade of Bengal pitchers, permitted the Yanks to fill the bases, and then made the mistake of passing Bob Meusel to force home the winning run.

Lou Gehrig collected his thirty-first homer in the second game, but even the pitchers were hitting them yesterday. Whitehill in the opener and Graham in the second clash scaled the barrier. Dale Alexander got his thirty-third and Charlie Gehringer his eleventh.

Jack Russell achieved the unenviable distinction of losing two games in one day at Boston. The Browns knocked him from the box in less than an inning of the opener, which they won by 6 to 1, and the Red Sox booted an unearned run in the first round of the second game when he tried to make a comeback. The Browns took this one by 1 to 0.

The Washington-Chicago game was prevented by rain. It will be impossible to play off the postponement.

The National League's abbreviated program was featured by the game at Forbes Field. Watson Clark and Jess Petty engaged in a keen pitching duel for seven hours, only to permit the contest to go completely on loose playing in the last two rounds. The Pirates pulled out the decision by 7 to 6 when Paul Waner drove in two runs with a triple in the ninth.

The Reds defeated the Giants by 7 to 5 at Cincinnati. The rest had an open date.

RUGGIRELLO KNOCKS OUT JACK SHAW

Salvatore Ruggirello, Italian heavyweight, knocked out Jack Shaw of Newark in less than two rounds Tuesday night in the feature attraction at Woodcliff Park. Shaw took the count after being hit while mixing it at close quarters. In one of the supporting bouts Frankie Konchina proved superior to Sammy Rambolo, knocking him out in the second round.

Sport Slants

By Alan J. Gould,

This fall offers not only the most spectacular intersectional football prospects of any that can be recalled off-hand but also the most significant.

From coast to coast, new rivalries are springing up and others being cemented to demonstrate the fact that regional barriers no longer mean a thing on the gridiron.

The Old Big Three of the east is now among the leaders in fostering intersectional rivalries, where for a number of years they featured the reactionary, stay-at-home programs.

This season Harvard engages Michigan at Ann Arbor, November 9, while Yale goes below the Mason and Dixon Line for the first time to help Georgia christen its new stadium at Athens, October 12.

Yale will play Chicago at Stagg Field later on to carry out its more progressive policy.

California also makes its first trip east to play Pennsylvania at Franklin Field in one of this October's main attractions. The Army will return Stanford's compliment by going to the far west for the first time.

Oregon will play Florida at Miami. Notre Dame's slate, as usual, embraces leaders of the south, east and far west. Washington is booked to visit Chicago.

Big stadia, big drawing cards and big money have made these elaborate touring programs possible. Alumni demands, where he big universities are concerned, also have an important bearing on the schedule-making.

It may be hippodroming, to a certain extent, but modern football pays a lot of important athletic freight in the colleges, besides furnishing one of the healthiest influences in amateur sport.

It may be just a coincidence but the year that has marked the passing of such immortals of the outfield as Cobb and Speaker also happens to have marked the advent of an unusual crop of new stars along the outer ramparts.

Earl Averill of Cleveland, Roy Johnson of Detroit, Scarritt of the Boston Red Sox and Johnny Frederick of Brooklyn are among the outstanding recruits of the year, all holding down regular berths in fine stiye in their first season.

Chuck Klein, the sensational Phillie clouter, came up late in 1928 but this is his first full year. His team-mate, Lefty O'Doul, has been in and out of the big show for some time but this is first season he has had a chance to perform regularly in the outfield and make his mark as a star.

ARMY GRIDDERS TO PLAY SIX GAMES AT WEST POINT

The Army football team will open its season at West Point on September 28 against Boston University, inaugurating a schedule of six home games that are expected to draw many football fans from Kingston and other communities within easy reach of the famous military grounds.

Some of the stellar material of last year's Army team will be seen in action against Boston. Ed Messinger, former Kingston High School star and prominent left end of last season's West Point eleven, is expected to be one of the team's scoring mainstays during the coming grid season, while "Red" Cagle's record as a backfield presages that he will be the bane of elevens facing the soldiers this year.

The complete home Army schedule is:

September 28—Boston University.
October 5—Gettysburg College.
October 12—Davidson College.
November 2—University of South Dakota.
November 16—Dickinson College.
November 23—Ohio Wesleyan University.

Before each home game there will be a full dress review at 1:10 p. m. on the parade ground.

Sonnenberg Defeats Stasiak.

Kansas City, Sept. 11 (AP).—Stanley Stasiak, the big Pole, fell victim of the flying tackle, the favorite hold of "Dynamite" Gus Sonnenberg, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, in a match here last night. Members of the Missouri Athletic Commission who recently adopted a code prohibiting "deliberate butting" made no attempt to interfere with the champion's tactics.

Good Football Prospects Here

Prospects looked bright for the formation of a Yellow Jacket football team Tuesday night when some of the gridders who represented Kingston on the eleven last year were present at a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. and consented to fill their regular positions and do a lot of boosting for the success of the team.

Although it was announced that a manager was to be chosen at the meeting, no one was picked to do the booking for the Yellow Jackets. William Bayer, who successfully handled the team two years ago and was slated to fill the managerial berth this season, will not accept the position because he is pressed for time by his business. Several are interested in managing the team and it is expected that a financial man will be picked in the near future.

As far as actual playing material is concerned there is a fine nucleus to start. Joie Hoffman, Ed Leverett, Vince Rice, Harry Scheffel, Steve Rose, Kenneth Kennedy, Earl Terwilliger, "Big" and "Little" Winkky and Jim Cassidy are said to have signified intentions of playing this year. They all have had experience with the Yellow Jackets during the team's existence as a stellar eleven.

"Beany" Beanman, backfield star of the West Point Artillery for the past several seasons, and a man who made a good mark while playing on two or three occasions with the Yellow Jackets, has written Joie Hoffman that he would like to play with the local team this year. It is said that Beanman figures on taking up a residence in this city.

Carl Preston, coach of the Yellow Jackets for the past three seasons, will be back on the job to again put a winning team in the field. His strategy was the factor in many a win for the Kingston boys, who regard Preston as one of the best coaches available.

Deciding Game On Saturday

Both the Garcos and the Hercules are practicing hard for the deciding game of the Industrial League series Saturday at the Athletic Field. As each team has won a game and are quite evenly match it will be hard to pick a winner. The pitcher most likely will decide the contest. Ken Best, who won the first game for the Powdermen, will be on the mound again, and no doubt, Walt Black, the pitcher who won the second game for the Garcos, will try to repeat.

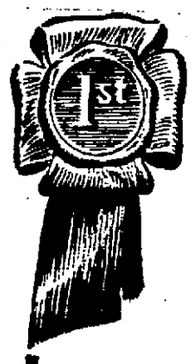
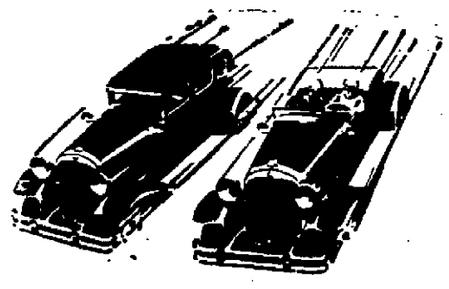
first prize
for reliability





The Grand Prize for reliability in the 15-day running of the famous "Tour de France" was awarded to Essex the Challenger. The two Essex entries finished the race without a single penalty—the only cars with perfect scores—winning by a great margin over the strong field of high-priced American and European cars. . . . ¶ Not only the Grand Prize, but the Ansaldo Cup, for quick getaway; the Lyonnais Cup, the Pyrenees Cup, the Atlantic Cup, the Cup of Brittany, the Cup of Normandy and the Cup of the North were also taken by Essex the Challenger.

Performs Like a Costly Car Because Built Like a Costly Car

Essex the Challenger looks and acts like a costly car because it is built like a costly car. Its enormous success has inspired others to claim qualities "like Essex". Yet everything about it—appearance, performance, comfort and luxurious smoothness—mark it apart and altogether different.

To be like Essex without building like Essex is a goal no car has found possible. More than 200,000 owners know the outright facts. You can know them too in 30 minutes behind the wheel.

You can only find comparison for Essex qualities among costly cars, because in design and construction it stands with the practice of the fine car field.

All These "Extras" at No Extra Cost

Its good size and impressive appearance appeal to those who want comfort, distinction and good looks. Its completeness in the things which contribute to costlier car advantages, is outstanding. Radiator shutters—side lamps—chromium plated bright work—four hydraulic shock absorbers—adult size roominess and adjustable seats are details only costlier cars have provided.

Wealthy Brother Seeks Rutherford

If William Rutherford, supposed to be about 50 years old and living in Kingston, who was adopted after being placed in St. John's Home, Brooklyn, will communicate with Mrs. James Acker, East Kingston, he will be placed in touch with his brother, who is dying and is looking for William as an heir.

When Mr. Rutherford's mother died, about 1880, he was placed in a children's home in Brooklyn and was later adopted by a Rondout family. Since his adoption his brother has received no word of his whereabouts. His name may possibly be Meade at the present time.

The brother is said to be wealthy and failing in health. He wishes to find Mr. Rutherford and intends to settle his estate upon him, according to Mrs. Acker.

Mrs. Acker was an old friend of the family in Brooklyn and received word concerning the situation from a relative of Mr. Rutherford. Any information concerning Mr. Rutherford would be appreciated by Mrs Acker.

2 ENTRANTS IN 1,200 MILE BOVINE DERBY

Cows Making Long Trip on Hoof to Show.

St. Louis.—When "Tomboy" and "Alice," two pure bred Ayrshire cows, trudge through the streets of St. Louis early in October, this city will witness the finish of what is believed to be the first "bovine derby." Walking every step of the way from their homes in Vermont, the two cows are now en route to the national dairy show to be held in St. Louis, October 12 to 19.

Although it is necessary for the two cows to travel more than 1,200 miles in order to reach their destination, officials of the National Ayrshire Breeders' association, with offices in Brandon, Vt., and sponsors of the hiking cows, are confident that they will successfully complete the journey.

"Tomboy" and "Alice," it has been stressed, will not be interested in attractive vaudeville offers, as the purpose of their derby is merely to demonstrate that the modern pure bred cow has just as much endurance as the old-fashioned cattle that accompanied early settlers on their long overland trips to the Western states. After completing the first 300 miles of their long trek, the cows have proved that they are efficient producers while en route.

Barn Travels by Truck.

The smaller of the animals, "Tomboy," has milked as high as 50 pounds of 4 per cent milk per day, and is now turning out 46 pounds. "Alice" has made more than 10,000 pounds of milk since last October when she freshened and is now producing about three gallons daily.

Accompanying the cattle is an attractive "barn," mounted on a truck chassis, which serves as headquarters for the attendants as well as a base of supplies for the animals. One pound of balanced ration is fed for every four pounds of milk produced by the pair on their journey. No beet pulp, corn silage or hay is being carried. The cows are allowed to graze at night and along the roadside as they travel.

"Tomboy" was bred and is owned by L. B. Chapman, who maintains a herd of 200 Ayrshires on a mountainous farm near West Rutland. She is somewhat undersized, and before leaving home had never been fed more than six pounds of grain a day, nor ever enjoyed any legume hay or clover pasture. "Alice" was bred and is owned by the Vermont Industrial school at Vergennes, Vt. "Alice's" aunt—her mother's sister—is the highest record cow in Vermont. Both of the "bunion bossies" are said to be attractive specimens of the Ayrshire breed, and are red and white in color.

Follow Main Roads.

In selecting the animals for this march on St. Louis, no particular effort was made to secure outstanding or unusual specimens. Two breeders conveniently located to the Brandon office were invited to furnish candidates that would measure up to the average of their herds and the breed. One of the cows had been producing milk for only seven weeks when the trip was started. The other had been fresh more than eight months.

Original plans called for a route over dirt roads and the minimum use of hard surfaced highways. Experience, however, has demonstrated that the main paved roads are most satisfactory, and as a result the touring Ayrshires have followed the Cherry Valley turnpike and will follow other main roads.

Leather boots have been provided in the event of sore feet resulting from rough roads, but there has not yet been occasion to use them.

The two cows are traveling a minimum of ten miles a day, with occasional journeys of 13 and 14 miles a day. Attendants expect to walk the animals every day, with the exception of a week's stop at the Ohio state fair. By walking slightly more than 12½ miles a day, "Tomboy" and "Alice" can arrive in St. Louis on October 10 and have a day to rest before the opening of the national dairy show.

Milk weights are being kept and regular advanced registry supervision made while the cattle are traveling.

Angler Cuts Tentacles to Drive Away Octopus

Los Angeles, Calif.—Two men battled a huge octopus off the coast near here and emerged victorious. Capt. Web Monstad, of a fishing boat, fell into the clutches of the devil fish but was saved when Roy Pettibone, another fisherman, went to his rescue.

Pettibone, who was in a second boat, saw Monstad floundering and forced his way through a bed of kelp into which the captain had fallen.

Captain Monstad had disappeared beneath the surface. When he reappeared, Pettibone hacked off one tentacle after another. Captain Monstad fainted as Pettibone helped him into the boat, but was revived.

Doctor Braves Broken Leg to Save Patient

Paris.—Hopping about on his good leg, a young and courageous doctor of Villefranche-sur-Saone saved the life of one of his patients who was stricken with a hemorrhage in the physician's office. He ran downstairs to a druggist to obtain what was needed and returning slipped and broke his leg. Realizing the need of haste, he got up and managed to hobble back to the office and stop the bleeding.

Horses Walked With Ski

Ski were used as an aid to walking in deep snow by the Scandinavians long before the Christian era. The ancient Armenians had their horses trained to walk on ski in the snow.—London Answers.

LAST NIGHT on the RADIO

The high lights of a dozen of the world's greatest operas, presented by four Metropolitan Opera Company stars, a chorus and a symphony orchestra under the direction of Gennaro Papi, will be broadcast in the General Motors Family Party of Monday, September 16. Cadillac and La Salle will be hosts and announcements of new models will be made. The concert, continuing through a full hour, will be of a new type in operatic presentations, in that the program builds carefully to a dramatic climax with the four stars singing the immortal quartet from Verdi's "Rigoletto."

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank our many friends and neighbors for their kindness and beautiful floral tributes during the illness and death of our husband and father.
